Troops Land In Trinidad

Attempt To Quell Mutiny

Times News Services

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad — British Commonwealth troops from neighboring islands landed today to help the Trinidad government put down a mutiny which threatened this capital city.

The 200 army mutineers seized the Chaguaramas army base in support of the black power movement and the rebels were reported to be moving on the capital.

Two days of street rioting and fighting on Chaguaramas Peninsula, 12 miles from Port of Spain, have left five persons dead.

Two women were wounded today in separate outbreaks of shooting in downtown Port of Spain where a state of seige has been declared.

SMALL ARMS

The United States agreed today to fly small arms to Trinidad to help the government deal with the mutiny and also ordered its Caribbean task force to sail for the port to evacuate Americans if neeessary.

Washington is reported to have 2,000 marines stationed on the helicopter carrier Guadalcanal which is heading towards Trinidad.

U.S. PLANE TOLL SOARS IN VIETNAM

SAIGON (AP) — The U.S. command announced today the loss of four American planes over the lower panhandle of Laos and three helicopters in South Vietnam. It was one of the highest aircraft tolls reported at one time in the war.

The command said one American was killed, three are missing and three were injured in the crashes.

A total of 6,683 U.S. planes and helicopters worth more than $6,000,000,000 now have been reported lost in the war.

U.S. Oil Spill Bill Sets 12-Mile Limit

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — President Nixon has signed a water quality improvement act which provides "the first comprehensive method" for dealing with oil spills from vessels even beyond the U.S. three-mile territorial sea.

The act deals with the contiguous zone, generally defined as 12 miles out to sea, and differs in that fact from Canada's proposed Arctic pollution bill which specifies control over seas up to 100 miles from land.

The U.S. has rejected the Canadian proposal, which would also extend territorial waters to the limit of 12 miles from the present three.

Nixon signed the U.S. bill only days before Canada's proposed legislation was unveiled.

The spokesman said the act is considered to be within the laws already established by the 1956 Geneva convention on the territorial sea and contiguous zone and the 1954 agreement on the prevention of pollution of the sea by oil.

Victorians Take Action On High Cost of Dying

By JACK SCOTT

Victorians are seizing the opportunity to hold the line on the high cost of dying.

Membership in the local branch of the Memorial Society of British Columbia, a non-profit organization providing simple, no-frills funerals at a basic price of $125, has shown an unprecedented growth in the first quarter of 1970.

Directors of the society here say that enrolment in the 14-year-old organization took a spectacular rise with reports of a major take-over of British Columbia undertaking establishments and cemeteries by a United States-based company.

APPROACHES

Approaches have been made to at least two Victoria firms by Service Corporation International, of Houston, Texas, following their purchase of leading mortuaries and cemeteries in the Vancouver area.

The take-over there was criticized in the legislature by West Vancouver Liberal MLA Allan Williams who charged complicity with the government and Attorney-General Leslie Peterson in a scheme "to make profit out of bereavement."

It prompted a call from Herb Capozzi, Social Credit member for Vancouver Centre, for a complete investigation into the high cost of funerals.

Meantime, the Memorial Society, founded originally by members of the Unitarian Church, has completed arrangements to price its services to Vancouver Island members at the mainland level.

OFFICE, MORGUE

Premises in Victoria at 632 John Street have been refurbished to provide an office and morgue. A full-time undertaker represents the North Vancouver firm of First Memorial Services Ltd., a private company associated with the society since 1961. A non-denominational chapel for memorial servies is in the planning stage.

While the original aim of the society was "to provide service which will ease the emotional and financial burdens of final arrangements and preserve in memory the life rather than the death of the deceased" the cost factor has clearly played an increasing role in boosting membership.

MEMBERS UP

Society directors say that in the past three years enrolment in British Columbia has doubled to 30,000 members. Membership in Greater Victoria has increased from 1,800 in 1968 to more than 3,000 today.

"The growth rate has been so rapid in the first three months of this year that we can't keep our statistics up to date," said Mrs. Joan Bennett, secretary of the Victoria branch.

For the directors here the increase in membership means a long-awaited breakthrough to public acceptance of the concept that, if you've got to go, the way to go is with simplicity, a minimum of ritual and a price structure that's removed from emotion, status and "slumber-room salesmanship."

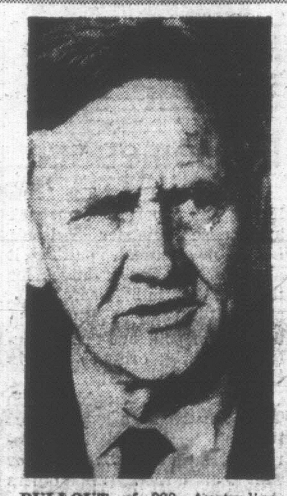

LARGEST HERE

From its original 55 Vancouver Unitarians the British Columbia branch has become the largest of its kind become the largest of its kind in Canada, second in North America only to the original Seattle society established in 1939.

David J. Murphy, recently appointed Vancouver Island manager of the society's undertaking firm, reports that some 100 funerals are conducted each month in Vancouver and an average of 12 a month in Victoria.

While the procedure of services is left to the discre-

Tight Controls Announced For Lotteries

Charitable and religious organizations will be limited to three lotteries a year in which 35 per cent of the proceeds must go to charity under provincial government regulations made public today.

Bingos are the only exception to the rule and may be held a maximum of 52 times a year under the guidelines spelled out by the attorney-general's department following the federal government action to turn licencing of gambling over to the provinces.

Only charitable and religious groups will be allowed to conduct lotteries.

NO WAGES

No wages other than a "nominal honorarium" may be paid to persons selling lottery tickets or managing a lottery.

A financial statement must be supplied to the government on the previous lottery held before a new licence will be granted and the attorney-general has the power to order an audit by an independent accountant.

The regulations appear to impose tight provincial government control on gambling as promised earlier by Attorney-General Leslie Peterson.

There had been speculation that a number of provinces might "open up" gambling laws in the wake of the transfer of responsibility from Ottawa.

Fees for licences will be $10 for lotteries in which the gross funds raised are less than $500, $10 for "one-occasion" lotteries where the amount raised is less than $1,000 and $100 for lotteries in excess of $1,000.

Cambodia's Aid Plea Lodged With UN

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Cambodia lodged an urgent appeal through the United Nations today for aid in combatting North Vietnamese and Viet Cong invaders.

In a letter circulated as a UN Security Council document, Ambassador Khim Tit asserted his country can never "bow to the law of the jungle" and is determined to protect its independence and territorial integrity.

"For this reason," he added, "it addresses an urgent appeal to all countries which love peace and justice to provide the assistance it needs to combat these forces of foreign aggression which are violating the sovereignty of its national patrimony and all international law."

U.S. President Richard Nixon is reported considering an urgent plea for weapons and other materials made last week by the new Cambodian regime, but Washington sources believe it has placed him in a delicate diplomatic and political situation.

He has taken a position against widening U.S. involvement in Southeast Asia, and is under congressional pressure to adhere to this policy, even though the Cambodian request was not for troop support.

Military spokesmen in the Cambodian capital today said North Vietnamese troops and Viet Cong guerrillas have launched a major assault against the provincial capital of Takeo, 50 miles from Phnom Penh, and government units have been withdrawn from the town.

Thieu Seeks More Aid

SAIGON (WP) — Commenting on the new timetable for U.S. withdrawals from Vietnam, President Nguyen Van Thieu said Tuesday night that he hoped "allied nations" — presumably the United States — would now provide "more satisfactory aid in every field" to help the Vietnamese protect themselves.

Thieu said his government had agreed to a further withdrawal of 150,000 U.S. troops during the next year, as outlined by President Nixon in a televised speech Monday night.

But he then quickly added that his government needed more aid. And he warned "free nations in the world" that permanent peace in Vietnam and Southeast Asia "will depend on the strength and determination of nations threatened by the Communists."

Colombian Army Holds Ex-Dictator

(Times News Services)

BOGOTA, Colombia — Colombian army troops surrounded the home of former dictator Gustavo Rojas Pinilla today, placing him under unofficial house arrest while his supporters called for his return to power.

The government declared a state of seige, equivalent to martial law, Tuesday night after the second day of increasing rioting since Rojas' apparent defeat in Sunday's presidential elections.

The civil registrar's office reported that after tabulation of 98 per cent of the votes, Rojas was trailing by nearly 50,000 votes, with 1,570,249 counted for the candidate of the governing National Front, Misael Pastrana Borrero, and 1,521,267 for the former military strongman.

AN AMERICAN VIEWPOINT:

World Opinion Sides With Canada's Move

By ROBERT ESTABROOK
The Washington Post

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.— Many diplomats concerned with environment questions believe that the United States has a strong legal case in its Arctic waters dispute with Canada but is nevertheless likely to lose the argument in terms of world opinion.

Canada acted earlier this month to assert a right to control pollution in a zone extending 100 miles out from its Arctic islands and also to claim a new 12-mile limit for national sovereignty. Although the U.S. asserted that it would not recognize either claim, these unilateral moves have occasioned nowhere near the international outcry they might have brought at another time.

One reason is that "environment" has suddenly become a magic phrase. To criticize so obviously popular an effort as pollution control would be like opposing progress or endorsing sin.

Another reason is that for their own individual purposes a number of countries want to see a change in the present three-mile limit on national sovereignty as recognized in international law.

Some nine Latin American countries, including Brazil, Argentina and Peru, have asserted national jurisdiction extending out 200 miles and see support of their claims in the Canadian effort. Certain Arab countries are said to have mentioned the possibility of hemming in Israel.

Diplomats note that the United States itself supported an extension of national sovereignty to six miles with an additional six-mile exclusive fishing zone at an international conference in 1960.

12-MILE LIMIT

The change failed of adoption by one vote, but nearly 60 countries now claim a 12-mile limit. Recently the state department called for a new effort to agree on a 12-mile zone.

A few larger countries agree with the U.S. contention that existing international law must be respected until it is changed. They also share the American fears that the Canadian effort may encourage such countries as Indonesia and the Philippines to press claims that straits between islands in their archipelagoes constitute national waters.

Some analysts also point out that, whatever the justification for prevention of pollution in the Arctic, the Canadian move is not wholly altruistic in other respects. Extension of territorial waters to 12 miles off Newfoundland and British Columbia and a claim of the entire Bay of Funday, for example, would benefit Canadian fishermen at the expense of others.

LAW CLOUDY

Even with misgivings on such points, however, many authorities here acknowledge that existing international law is cloudy on such problems as pollution. It was written to protect the rights of navies and shipping concerns, not the environment.

School Taxes In Area Lower

School taxes in most Vancouver Island school districts will be reduced this year, according to mill rates made public Tuesday by Education Minister Donald Brothers.

The figures show mill rates are down in eight of the Island's 14 school districts.

In the largest district, Greater Victoria, homeowners will have a net reduction in school taxes despite a rise in the mill rate of .07.

Decrease is due to the $10 increase in the homeowner grant from $150 to $160.

On a province-wide basis average mill rate for elementary and secondary schools and regional colleges has been set at 31.81, up slightly from last year's 31.72.

Of the province's 80 school districts, 35 will have reduced mill rates, another 30 will have increases of three mills or less, and 15 will have increases of over three mills.

Largest increase in B.C. was at Ladysmith where the mill rate leaped from 36.48 to 43.37, up 6.89 mills.

In West Vancouver, where recent defeat of a school referendum has forced the school board to slash almost $1 million from a $7 million budget, the mill rate went down 6.57 mills, from 38.02 to 31.45.

In the Saanich Peninsula district ratepayers will have to bear a 2.25 mill increase, from 29.75 to 32.0, making it the only local district to go over the provincial average of 31.81.

In Sooke the rate registered a decline of 1.19, from 29.66 to 28.47.

Taxes are levied on 75 per cent of the assessed value of improvements and on 100 per cent of the assessed value of the land.

Assessed value of B.C. real property is theoretically 50 per cent of the market value of land and improvements (buildings).

Taxes are calculated by multiplying the number of thousands of dollars of taxable assessments by the mill rate.

For example, on a mill rate of 30 property assessed at $10,000 will pay taxes of 30 times 10, or $300.

Mill rate comparisons for Vancouver Island school districts:

Rifles to Celebrate Last Birthday

The 110th birthday of the regiment—and its farewell — will be marked Saturday by the 1st Battalion, Queen's Own Rifles of Canada.

In a special ceremony, beginning at 2 p.m. at Work Point Barracks, the battalion will follow an ancient tradition of firing a feu de joie.

Lt.-Gen. G. A. Turcot, commander of mobile command, and senior members of his staff will be on hand for the ceremony, which is open to the public.

At 9 a.m. Monday, in a brief ceremony, the battalion will officially became the 3rd Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry and the Queen's Own will disappear from the regular order of battle of the Canadian forces.

try in London said it has placed on alert the guided missile frigates Sirius and Jupiter but it is not known if the ships are enroute to the riot-torn country.

Police said the rebels were coming over the hills into the capital and warned residents in the northern part of the city to barricade their houses and remain inside.

FIRST REPORTS

There are about 1,000 troops and a handful of coast guardsmen at Chaquaramas but first reports said only 200 were involved in the mutiny.

A government source said the troops landed today from Guyana and Jamaica but did not specify whether they were British.

There are about 2,000 British and American citizens working on the island and an unknown number of tourists.

Today's violence grew out of the arrest Tuesday night of 14 Black Power movement leaders. Trinidad police tried to bring the arrested leaders to the military camp in order to ship them aboard coast guard ships to Nelson Island, a small detention camp.

TURNED BACK

But when they arrived at the camp, police were turned back at its gates by army guards and forced to take their prisoners back to town, reports said.

Reports pieced together from witnesses indicated the following chronology of events:

An estimated 200-300 soldiers of the Trinidad and Tobago Regiment sumpathetic with the Black Power leaders charged toward the camp gates, but in doing so passed the quarters of the 100-man coast guard, which remained loyal to the government of Prime Minister Eric E. Williams.

Union Pickets Kamloops Job

First picket line in the eight-day lockout of B.C. construction trade unions went up today in Kamloops in response to "game-playing" by a contractor.

The lockout committee of B.C.-Yukon Building Trades Council authorized picketing of a Dominion Construction Co. shopping centre project this morning, reportedly because the company was using its own staff and members of other unions to do work belonging to locked out tradesmen.

John Schibli, secretary of Vancouver Island Building Trades Council, said the council's lockout committee would investigate similar complaints in connection with Dominion Construction's Hillside shopping centre here.

The spokesman referred to the Kamloops situation as "playing games," to which the union response is to shut down the entire job site.

Union strategy since the lockout began has been to keep at work those trades which are not locked out.

Seven unions were locked out by Construction Labor Relations Association initially, to which mainland plumbers and pipefitters were added Tuesday. In Greater Victoria, the building trades council estimates 245 men from all trades are directly affected by the lockout, with little effect up-Island and less than 30 per cent effectiveness in Greater Vancouver.

. . . COST OF DYING

tion of the individual members, spelled out in a "designation form" at the time of joining, most are, in the inelegant words of the morticians, "direct disposals."

Most members accept the original concept of the society which opposes embalming on the grounds that it "inflicts an unnecessary indignity on the body and is unnecessary on medical grounds." Embalming is carried out only in the rare case where it is specified or when a body is being sent to some distant point for burial.

Memorial services are most often conducted in churches, chapels or private homes without the presence of the body or, if present, with the casket closed. The use of "cosmetology" is discouraged and seldom requested. Relatives of the deceased can demand a viewing of the body, even in those cases where the member has specified against it, but the request is seldom made.

CREMATION POPULAR

More than 90 per cent of the members specify cremation, very often with the request that the ashes be scattered at sea.

The society encourages members to donate their eyes to the Canadian National Institute for the Blind or their bodies to the Faculty of Medicine of the University of British Columbia.

While elderly people in the past have tended to resist these concepts in favor of traditional rites figures in Victoria indicate that there is an increasing acceptance, particularly among those with moderate incomes.

"Many older people have revolted against the expensive and unnecessary panoply of the old-style funeral," in the opinion of Mrs. Bennett. "There's a determination, too, to protect their children from costs that could run to $1,000 or more. Joining the society becomes, for many older people, an act of conscience."

Directors of the society, who stress that "we quote a maximum price for total services while the private undertaker quotes only a minimum price," are proud that the cost of a society funeral has remained constant since the inception of the organization.

DIFFERENTIAL

A cost difference of $25 between Vancouver and Victoria will now be eliminated with the establishment here of the society's contracted undertaking facilities.

Funerals, in fact, will be cheaper in this area since the $40 cost of cremation at the municipally-operated Royal Oak crematorium is less than the established charges at Vancouver mortuaries.

Lifetime membership fees in the society are $5 for an individual or $10 for a family. This entitles the member to a "basic funeral" at $125, not including the cost of cremation or burial. The society provides a cloth-covered, silk-lined wooden coffin built to its simple specification by a firm at Yarrow, B.C.

Burial costs, usually involving $100 or more for a plot and about $50 for interment charges, or $75 church funeral services arranged by the society with the use of a hearse, family car and pall-bearers' car, are additional charges borne by the member.

. . . U.S. VIEW

Moreover, Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau cleverly cited an American precedent to support his argument. He referred to a 1948 proclamation by President Truman of an American right to exploit the continental shelf for oil — a claim that became the basis for later international law.

Unquestionably there was genuine annoyance in Washington that the Trudeau government went ahead unilaterally despite strong American efforts to dissuade it. Particularly because of the defense importance of the Arctic, there is real concern over implications of the precedent being set.

TWEAK EAGLE'S TAIL

Nevertheless, diplomats here have concluded that some of the indignation is for effect and that Washington understands the nationalist urge in Ottawa to give the eagle's tail an occasional tweak. Canadian officials say there have been no threats of U.S. retaliation.

Meanwhile, with the new voyage of the icebreaking supertanker Manhattan focusing world interest on avoiding Arctic pollution, the betting here is that Trudeau will win his gamble.

Polls Show Wilson In Comeback

LONDON (AP) — The Louis Harris poll reports a comeback by Prime Minister Wilson's Labor government, putting it ahead of the Conservatives for the first time in 2½ years.

The Conservatives still lead in the Gallup poll, but their popularity dropped one per cent in the last month.

The Harris poll, published in The Daily Express today, gives Labor 46 per cent of the electorate, the Conservatives 44 per cent and the Liberals and others the remaining 10 per cent.

The Express, a Conservative paper, says Wilson might call a general election in June if the trend continued.

The Express says one factor in the sudden swing to Labor might be inclusion in the survey for the first time of the 18- to 21-year-olds who this year were given the vote.

B.C. Grits Attack CRTC Censorship

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia's Liberal MLAs Tuesday urged the federal government to replace all members of the Canadian Radio-Television Commission because CRTC policies "amount to censorship."

The five members of the provincial Liberal caucus, after a closed meeting here, issued a statement rejecting CRTC decisions regarding "drastic restriction of cablevision companies."

"Encouraging Canadian talent is healthy but the decision of Pierre Juneau and his commission to attempt this by sealing off airwaves at the 49th parallel is contrary to our ideas of Canadian freedom.

"Likewise, the CRTC's apparent belief that they can legislate the artistic endeavours of the country is misguided.

"We urge the federal government to replace Mr. Juneau and his commission with individuals whose philosophies and views are more in keeping with the concepts of freedom and opportunity held by Western Canadians.

"We don't want our country to be shut behind an electronic curtain rung down by Mr. Juneau."

The Weather and You

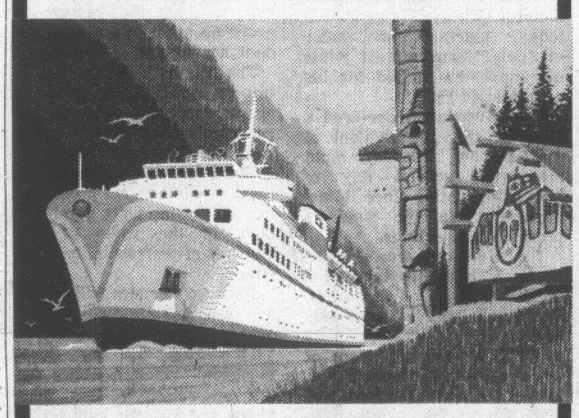

By CARL RIBLET JR.

There are people who suffer from allergics due entirely to cold — cold weather and even air refrigeration. The refrigeration that makes warm and hot seasons even up with the liveability of the cold seasons causes such people to suffer much pain and discomfort.

Some of them first become aware of their troubles when they go to work in refrigerated rooms, such as packing rooms in supermarkets. They suffer hives, rashes and actual destruction of the skin.

The small arteries near the skin in the body of one who suffers cold allergies are very sensitive to the onslaught of cold. The arteries go into a spasm. Less blood can go through the arteries and the skin becomes white, then blue, then red. Pain is intense and the sufferer must change his work effort to a balmy climate.

Sea Fever Finally Gripped Him After Three Trips Before Mast

Captain Logging 100 Years

By PAT DUFOUR

He wears his years well—and they are many. Capt. George J. LeMarquand, 1725 Beach, will log his 100th birthday May 31.

The man who was captain of his own brigantine at 24 looks less like a retired sea captain than he does a diplomat, used to moving in sophisticated circles.

It is only when he speaks that you know that here is a man that has looked hurricanes in the eye — and won. His rich Channel Islands' accent is still there, overlaid with the decisiveness of a man the seas could not intimidate.

It was not always so.

The captain will tell you with humor of his first two voyages.

DOUBLE-TOPSAIL

"I come from a long line of seamen and it was in March 1884 that my father decided to take me to sea. He was the captain of a double-topsail schooner, the Donna Maria.

"We left Bristol, bound for St. John's, Nfld. It was a very rough trip and when it was over I wasn't very anxious about going to sea."

LeMarquand's father decided to enrol his son at a Newfoundland college. His son had different ideas.

"I didn't learn a thing there so I left and got a job as a clerk. I spent the season in Labrador. When my father came back he ordered me to go straight aboard and in six months we were off to Portugal."

TRIP ROUGH

That trip was not better than the first.

"It was very rough and my father was so disgusted with me at one point that he told me I should go ashore and join the Salvation Army because that was the only way I could ever make captain!"

After six months his father decided to transfer him to another ship.

That didn't work out so LeMarquand signed on with a captain from his home port of Jersey who's once served as first mate on the Donna Maria. This time the sea fever struck — and he stayed — for three years.

Then it was a stint at the navigational school at St. John's which earned him his first mate's papers at 18.

GRIM REMINDER

An oil painting of his first command, the brigantine May, dominates one wall of the captain's home. High seas punish her hull, a grim reminder of a three-day hurricane in the Atlantic which she weathered.

"My first mate was a new man. We lost him on Christmas Day. It was 8:30 in the morning and I looked out to see a huge sea tunnelling down on our stern. I yelled to him to come forward.

"It was too late — he made a dash for the rigging but was swept away. I was waist-high in water, trying to save him."

LeMarquand and his crew spent two days jettisoning the cargo.

RIBS OPEN

It worked.

When the hurricane abated, the May still rode the seas, her rigging intact but her ribs opened up by the storm's battering.

In 1895 the captain decided to switch his allegiance to steam. "Steamers were coming in and I signed on as first officer in one for the experience."

Then came a series of trips, in one ship after another; toting fruit, salt, fish and an endless variety of cargoes.

For five years, the captain came ashore to manage a whaling station in Newfoundland.

Then to sea again, this time as navigating captain for a sealer.

"We got 29,000 seals in one season. When we discharged them it was off to the West Indies for a cargo of fruit."

WHALING STATION

It was while he was on the sealer Beladventure that he received a telegram to come west and manage a whaling station, this time at Rose Harbor in the Queen Charlottes.

On Christmas Day in 1919 he was to receive another telegram. This one led him to another post, as manager of the whaling station at Sechelt. Two years later the station at Seattle was added to his charge.

Those were the days when 12 whalers plied west coast waters, some of them capturing as many as nine whales a day.

Although shore-bound, the captain could still share in the achievements of the whaling fleet.

"Those were good days with the humpbacks yielding a good amount of oil. But the best were the sulphur-bottoms with some of them weighing in at a 130 tons."

Always quick to read the signs, Le Marqand decided to quit at 63.

"By then it was 1933 and I could see the whales were giving out."

He retired.

"I was offered all kinds of jobs, one as manager of a hotel and another as manager of a brewery — I wasn't interested in that."

But he admits that, even at 63, he wouldn't have minded returning to the sea.

Pollution Hearings Sought

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal authorities have failed to find a way to guarantee that public hearings will be held to frame water management and anti-pollution measures, Resources Minister J. J. Greene said Tuesday.

He left it to a Commons committee to write into the proposed Canada water act a provision for obligatory public hearings.

"I would like you to consider changes of wording intended to make it quite clear that public hearings or other appropriate inputs from those concerned are a vital part of our planning," he told the Commons resources committee.

But, he conceded later at a news conference, the legal draftsmen had been unable to provide for compulsory public hearings without "hamstringing" the officials of water quality management agencies in the performance of their tasks.

"I'm certainly in favor of writing it in," he told reporters after unveiling changes to the proposed act to the committee.

Ex-Ruler of Swat Seeks Mandate

SWAT, Pakistan (AP) — The royal family of Swat, out of business since mid-1969 when the military government merged its Swatdom into the rest of Pakistan, plans to put its future before the people at the polls.

The once-ruling Wali of Swat, Miangul Jahanzeb, 61, and his heir-apparent, Miangul Aurangzeb, 41, officially lost their jobs when this 4,000-square-mile tourist paradise and relic of frontier feudalism lost its semi-autonomous character.

Aurangzeb is telling friends he plans to stump for a seat as Swat's representative in Pakistan's constituent assembly. The military promises the assembly will come out of the country's election Oct. 5 and make a civilian constitution.

For the 600,000 Swatis, the stand is likely to become a plebiscite on the future of the royal family.

RULED COUNTRY

"I can't let my people down," Aurangzeb has said. He referred to the Wali's followers, employees of the old Swat state, now caught up in anti-Wali politics arousing cries for the expulsion of the Wali. The Wali ruled virtually absolutely according to Islamic and mountain law in this valley along Pakistan's still-wild Northwest Frontier. He succeeded his father who, with the approval of British colonial rulers, founded the independency in 1926.

Swat politics usually sounds as if it should be put to music by Sigmund Romberg. Lately the notes have been more tragic. Five persons were killed in February when militiamen fired into a mob at the state's one emerald mine.

After the Wali's downfall last summer a mob of outraged supporters burned down the local honey factory, owned by a man who had supported the Pakistani takeover. He fled.

Planned Withdrawal

PRESIDENT NIXON'S AN-nouncement of a further withdrawal of 150,000 troops from Vietnam over the next twelve months came at an odd time. It was opportune, of course, as a reminder to his countrymen that his earlier declaration of policy was still in force, and that withdrawals would take place in definite stages. Although a decrease of strength in Vietnam has been underway at a rate of some 12,000 men a month, the headline-making contingents of homeward-bound forces which drew national attention a few months ago have been lacking. Mr. Nixon has now reaffirmed that the mass movement is still active policy.

But the timing of the announcement was unusual in that it came as fighting flared again in Vietnam and new battles involving Communist forces were reported in Laos and Cambodia. Against this background, the American statement carried overtones which gave it added certitude even if at the same time they made it seem less logical.

The chief professed reason for the American withdrawal is that the South Vietnam forces are proving able to carry the burden of the conflict themselves, obviating the need for outside help. This Mr. Nixon reiterated. It has happened, he said, at a rate which "has substantially exceeded our original expectations." As regards South Vietnam that is gratifying news.

But the aggression of northern Communists against the Southeast Asian ricebowl, to thwart and prevent which the United States sent advisers, arms and troops in the first place, apparently is being broadened and intensified. And if South Vietnam forces are now progressing to a point at which they will carry on without United States manpower, what of the other parts of Southeast Asia — Laos and Cambodia — which now find themselves increasingly the active targets of the northern Communist forces?

Mr. Nixon did not enlarge on that in his Monday night announcement. But the slowness of the projected withdrawal — which will still leave more than 280,000 American troops in Vietnam a year from now — and Mr. Nixon's generalized warning to Hanoi that it will be taking "grave risks" if it steps up the military action in the three countries included, make it plain that the United States is still very much in Southeast Asia and will be so for some time. With United States air and naval backing for its land forces, there will still be formidable strength in the area if North Vietnam decides to increase the pressure.

The wonder is that Hanoi is taking its present course. The obvious strategy would be to present a picture of peace in Southeast Asia so that the American presence would be clearly superfluous and the withdrawal thus speeded, and then win with relative ease through political action what the military arm has been unable to achieve in the last four years. Increased aggression at this time can only make the American presence appear necessary, and strengthen opinion in the United States that, despite disillusion and war-weariness, some outside policing may be called for after all. Even China might be worried by a too-successful Hanoi.

A Way of Living

FEW PROJECTS OF B.C. HYDRO have aroused more widespread protest and annoyance than the plan to run a high-voltage overhead transmission line through the Inter-urban-Burnside Road area. Customarily, hydro engineers have followed the technically feasible method of putting power lines between two points by the shortest route and in the ostensibly cheapest manner possible. But growing public appreciation of the living environment—the countryside and its beauties and uses for mankind — has now brought a wide realization that the estimated costs of power transmission lines should include more than the materials and labor involved.

They should also include the economic damage suffered by neighborhoods whose attractions will be depreciated by the power lines; they should include the losses inflicted on the physical landscape as well as on its aesthetic values; they should include the fact that mankind is awakening to a belief that the planet should be an attractive place to live on as well as an industrial site to work in — following the same logic that leads a man to run his plumbing and heating pipes through the basement rather than through his living room.

Industrialists have traditionally considered most of the earth as basement, and acted accordingly. Today, mankind is becoming aware that much more of the planet should be considered as living room and treated as such. Obviously, B.C. Hydro is many years behind the public in its philosophy and in its practices. Now would be a good time for it to come out of the basement — and leave its tools down there.

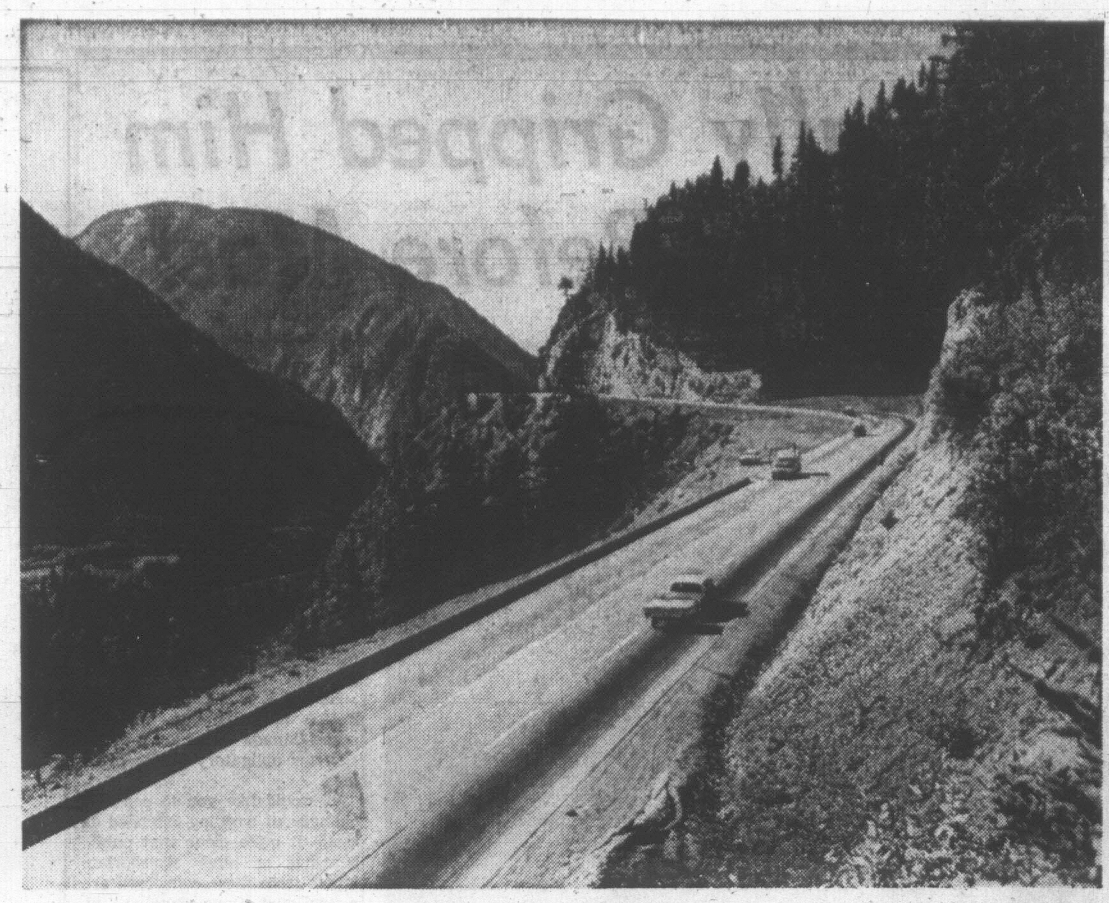

The Lenin Centenary

THE 100th ANNIVERSARY OF the birth of Vladimir Ilyich Ulyanov. — known to history as Nicolai Lenin — is being observed today in various ways throughout the Communist world. In Russia, according to recent report, it will be work as usual, the inference being that Lenin, an unostentatious man himself, would have liked it that way. But whatever the reactions to the anniversary, the child born 100 years ago was destined to leave an indelible mark not only on the history of his country but of the world.

Conditions in Russia were ripe for change. Lenin moulded that change into the form of Marxism as he interpreted it. A dynasty was swept away. A peace of sorts was effected with an enemy. A country struggled upward from the ravages of war, of backwardness in spite of brilliant intellectuals, to a stumbling industrial development and through it to a pinnacle of scientific excellence, suffered the agonies of another war on its own soil and emerged as one of the two superpowers of the world.

Lenin died in January, 1924, after failing in health for six years with wounds from a fanatic's gun. Russia today and Communism in different guises elsewhere in the world, recognize his draughtsmanship of the new society. Blood, terror, tragedy and high achievement are part of the story of the man who believed the end justified the means.

The symbol of evil or the object of reverence, he lived and directed days that shook the world and left it beyond restoration to its earlier social form. One hundred years after his birth, few can doubt his particular genius.

Letter

Have We Forgotten?

Civilization, where is thy conscience? What atrocities are committed in the name of democracy and freedom?

Most people admit that it was an unfortunate mistake for the U.S. to venture into a war against a small primitive nation. Even President Nixon admitted this mistake and then proceeded to intensify the war by expanding into Laos and Cambodia.

What divine right has the U.S. to interfere in other countries because of different social systems?

Is our way of life such a shining example of social order with our race problems, poverty amidst plenty, air and water pollution? Our technology is being used only for conquering of nations and enslaving people for profit, in much the same way as the whisky traders dealt with the Indians.

No wonder the young people today rebel and revolt, or opt out into a world of their own, disgusted by this callous double standard the adult world has developed. Except for a handful of people such as Professor Wald, Dr. Spock, the draft resisters, peace groups — all are silent! Is this not how Hitler came to power? — Concerned.

FROM OTTAWA — By MAURICE WESTERN

Putting the Arctic Issue in Context

THE Parliamentary debate on the Arctic Pollution Bill should have the useful result of setting in a truer perspective the over-dramatized conflict between the Canadian government and the U.S. State Department. While Members did not have available the precise texts of notes exchanged between Ottawa and Washington, the State Department release of April 15 had been published in Hansard and it speaks for itself. The key paragraph reads:

Western

"We are concerned that this action by Canada, if not opposed by us, would be taken as precedent in other parts of the world for other unilateral infringements of the freedom of the seas. If Canada had the right to claim and exercise exclusive pollution and resources jurisdiction on the high seas, other countries could assert the right to exercise jurisdiction for other purposes, some reasonable and some not, but all equally invalid according to international law; merchant shipping would be severely restricted and naval mobility would be seriously jeopardized. The potential for serious international dispute and conflict is obvious."

Internationalism Stressed

The statement also contains this revealing paragraph:

"With respect to the 12-mile limit on the territorial sea, we have publicly indicated our willingness to accept such limit, but only as part of an agreed international treaty also providing for freedom of passage through and over international straits."

This is direct confirmation of the view that American primary concern is not with the Arctic — where there is no "international strait" — but with the possible impact elsewhere of what Canada is doing in the Arctic.

In other words the vigorous objection taken by the State Department is for the record and in order to preserve the legal position of the United States in the event of controversies more threatening to American interests in other parts of the world. It is not for the purpose of forcing a test in Arctic waters.

The distinction between what is reasonable and what is not reasonable is also significant, particularly in view of the statement that "the United States is acutely aware of the peculiar ecological nature of the Arctic region and the potential dangers of oil pollution in that area." Awareness will be particularly keen in Alaska and all the Aleutians. As Paul St. Pierre (Coast Chilcotin) noted, the Canadian action has been endorsed by Senator Stephens of that state. It will doubtless have equal appeal for Californians, especially around Santa Barbara.

Such legal differences among states are of common occurrence; relatively few of them go to the world court and fewer involve more than verbal violence. Matters might be different if the United States had a single interest in Canada but in fact it has a multiplicity of interests. To pursue one (and that a marginal one) at the expense of others would be absurd, especially at a time when relations between the two countries are already complicated by an accumulation of problems.

The State Department, being very well served by its personnel in Ottawa, will be aware from the House of Commons debate that the present dispute is in no way comparable to the 1963 controversy over nuclear arms which divided opinion in Canada. Mr. Sharp faced some criticism in Parliament but only from Members who felt that the government ought to have gone farther in the assertion of Arctic sovereignty. Thus Mr. Stanfield:

"I say without any reservation that I and my party support bill C-202 in principle. We very earnestly support it as a measure to control the pollution of the North."

Similarly Mr. Douglas: "Any reservations we may have about some aspects of this question should not detract from our wholehearted endorsation of the legislation contained in these two bills . . . I think we should let the whole world know that on this question Canadians are united and unanimous in the support of exercising jurisdiction over pollution in the Arctic archipelago."

As was clearly shown in the debate, notably by Mr. Douglas and Mr. Sharp, the international law of the sea has frequently originated in unilateral action. Thus Norway, being in legal conflict with Britain, introduced the straight base line system in 1951. It was later (in 1958) incorporated in a general convention. More significantly, perhaps, the United States did the same thing itself when Mr. Truman in 1945 unilaterally asserted rights of conservation in certain areas of the high seas and unilaterally declared that the United States would henceforth exercise control over the resources of the continental shelf, which in some places extends outwards from the shore to a distance of 250 miles.

True U.S. Interest

Since the true interest of the United States is in other waters, the state department might be well advised to give closer attention to Mr. Trudeau's doctrine, which distinguishes the Arctic as a special case in no way comparable to the waterways of temperate or tropical seas. Evidently Washington officials already recognize this in part since they refer in their release to its "unique environment" and "peculiar ecological nature." Since it is unique, action for its preservation would be valueless as a precedent for action in totally unlike areas.

There has been some concern, reflected in the debate, that the exercise by Canada of a limited authority to protect against pollution in areas beyond those specifically defined as territorial waters might prejudice a later claim to sovereignty. Mr. Sharp in partial agreement with Mr. Stanfield, said: "If in any way our legislation reflected upon our claims to a larger sovereignty, we would certainly have proceeded otherwise." He contended, however, that there was no inconsistency and made this interesting point:

"In the 1910 North Atlantic coast fisheries case between Britain and the United States, the permanent court of arbitration held that a state may, without prejudice to its claim to sovereignty over the whole of a particular area of the sea, exercise only so much of its sovereign powers over such part of that area as may be necessary for immediate purposes. That case is of particular relevance to the Canadian situation since it involved areas of Newfoundland, Labrador and other parts of Canada's Atlantic coast."

Here there is an immediate purpose of some urgency. For international action, unfortunately, involves very long delays as demonstrated by the anti-pollution efforts of a long established agency, the International Joint Commission, on the Great Lakes.

As Mr. Sharp warned: "We cannot be too late everywhere. We cannot wait until the damage has been done in the Arctic if only because such damage in that environment may well be irreversible."

FROM UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — By WILLIAM R. FRYE

A New Geneva Conference on Vietnam?

HAS the Soviet Union now tipped its hand on a willingness to end the Vietnam war? Some UN diplomats are cautiously speculating that this may be the case in the light of a statement by Soviet delegate Yakov Malik apparently opening the way to a new Geneva conference. The Kremlin has long resisted reactivation of the Geneva machinery, and even balked at formal consultations under provisions of the Geneva accords of 1954 and 1962. These accords ended earlier conflicts on the Indo-China peninsula.

Frye

Malik's turnabout, it is agreed, could be no more than a propaganda gesture in connection with Lenin's 100th anniversary. Lenin is being portrayed as a great apostle of peace, and the current regime as his faithful imitator.

But UN people remember that twice before, when Moscow was ready to pull back from a major conflict with the West, Malik was chosen as the vehicle for disclosing that fact and getting the machinery of negotiation into operation.

Both the previous instances in which Malik carried an olive branch also occurred at the UN.

One was a radio statement in 1950 tipping Moscow's willingness to back a cease-fire at the 38th parallel in Korea. The other was an intimation to an American in the UN delegates' lounge that the Kremlin had eased its terms for ending the 1948 Berlin blockade.

Each of these two overtures led, within weeks, to negotiations for an end of the conflict.

In the present instance, if Moscow wanted to end the Vietnam war, it could presumably influence the bargaining posture of the Communists at Paris in such a way as to make agreement possible.

But that would have a direct effect only on the fighting in Vietnam, not on the political balance in Cambodia, where the Communists have recently lost both influence and strategic advantage. Nor would it assist Moscow in Laos, where despite Communist gains, a Westward-leaning government still is in power.

Barrier at Paris

This could not be done effectively at the Paris peace talks, as presently constituted: it could be done at a new Geneva conference on the 1954 or 1962 model. Neither Laos nor Cambodia is represented at Paris. Each participated in the two Geneva parleys.

Recent events in Cambodia, which have opened major new political and military opportunities for the United States, may have influenced the Kremlin to seek a settlement, it is believed. If so, the world has now been alerted to that fact.

The tip-off came at a news conference, itself a rare occasion for Malik—and, indeed, for any Soviet UN delegate.

It opened with a lengthy prepared tribute to Lenin. Then, in response to a question from a left-leaning Indian correspondent, Malik said "only a new Geneva conference could bring about a fresh solution" to the problem of peace-observation machinery for Cambodia and "lead to a relaxation of tension" in the area of Indo-China. Indo-China is made up of Laos, Cambodia and the two Vietnams.

If these objectives — better policing and eased tensions —were "the point" of a recent French statement advocating reactivation of the Geneva conference, the idea is "deserving of attention," Malik said. He remarked later that "perhaps something is being done" about it.

American, British, French and other sources say what is "being done," hitherto without encouragement from Moscow, is this:

ICC Requests

Twice in March, the new post-Sihanouk government of Cambodia issued statements indicating a wish for return of the three-nation International Control Commission which was ousted from Cambodia last year by Prince Sihanouk. The ICC consists of India (chairman), Canada and Poland.

Following up, Britain twice approached the Soviet Union, getting no encouragement. Simultaneously, London sounded out India to see if it would not simply call a meeting of the commission.

Delhi hesitated, wishing first to reach private agreement on what the commission would do. Such agreement being thus far unattainable, nothing has happened.

It was against this background that Malik said "only" a new conference could "bring about a fresh solution" to the problem of reactivating the ICC.

Red China has actively and sometimes virulently opposed any step toward a Vietnam settlement, including the holding of a new Geneva conference.

Diplomats therefore wonder whether the Kremlin cleared Malik's statement with Peking, or whether Russia acted in the knowledge that the move was likely to embarrass its one-time ally. They assume the latter was the case.

Participants in the 1954 conference were the United States, the Soviet Union, China, Britain, France, Laos, Cambodia and the two Vietnams. To these were added, in 1962, India, Canada, Poland, Burma and Thailand.

Looking Back

From the Times of April 22, 1910

Mark Twain (Samuel Clemens) grew much weaker late yesterday afternoon. He became restless and asked Dr. Halsey for something. The doctor could not understand the words and Twain motioned for a pad and pencil. "Spectacles" was the word he wrote on the pad. The physicians predicted he would last through the night but he passed away at 6:30 last night.

Dick Gregory Reaches for Young Minds

Taking Ghetto Message To America's Campuses

By BOB OLMSTEAD
National Catholic Reporter

"Here's the favor I'd like for you to do for me when the riot season opens up again," Dick Gregory is telling campus audiences across the U.S. these days.

"I'd like for you young kids to go home, get with your mom and daddy . . .

"When you get home, I want you to take your television set and put it in the middle of the room and turn on the evenin' news, 'cause they sockin' it to the town."

The last words are dripped slowly, almost tauntingly, as Gregory does when he twists the knife he knows he's just stuck in listening whites.

"After you get the evenin' news on, run upstairs and get your mom and daddy and bring 'em back down and put 'em right in front of the television set where they can watch them niggers burn the town.

"And I want you to listen to 'em—you've heard it before, but just listen to 'em—discuss what they lookin' at.

"And then after you've heard 'em for a while I'd like you to do me a favor. I'd like for you to go back to that television set and turn the sound off. So them parents of yours can't hear nothin'—just look at niggers burn the town.

"And while them ol' sick fools is lookin' at them niggers burn down the town, I want you to do me that favor by pulling out your Declaration of Independence, get way back behind them fools, and while they lookin' at them niggers burn the town, read the Declaration of Independence as loud as you can read it, and maybe for the first time, they will understand what they lookin' at."

The blacks in the audience are already applauding, but Gregory is just warming up. In a rising voice:

"You have to read it loud, and read it clear."

Then, in a flat-out, level scream — so loud there are a few uneasy giggles from some who think this must be another joke, Gregory slams out a screaming recitation, each word as ringing as a hammer blow:

"WE HOLD THESE TRUTHS (pause)

"TO BE SELF-EVIDENT (pause)

"THAT ALL MEN ARE CREATED EQUAL (pause)

"ENDOWED BY THE creator (emphasizing "creator" by coming down a reverent decibel or two, and then again pulling out all the stops)

"WITH CERTAIN INALIENABLE RIGHTS (pause)

"THAT WHEN THESE RIGHTS ARE DESTROYED (pause)

"OVER LONG! PERIODS! OF TIME! (pause)

"IT IS YOUR DOOOOOOOTY (half pause) TO DESTROY, ABOLISH THAT GOVERNMENT,"

The pent-up roar of approval from the blacks begins before Gregory finishes the word "duty," swells with "destroy," and the wild cheering nearly drowns out the final screamed "abolish that government."

The effect on whites can be shattering.

Even without the overpowering effect of the black reaction (My God, do they all feel this way?) the recitation can stun whites brought up to believe the Declaration of Independence is something holy, and therefore quite dead.

A documentary film shot during a Gregory talk at the University of Alabama (Dick Gregory is Alive and Well) searches the faces of the Southern youths as they sit in silence, trying to sort out the emotions that flow from images of niggers burnin' down the town, their white parents' reaction to it, and the possibility that the American Revolution was about something like this.

After Gregory's Kansas City talk, a Kansas state senator was so upset he sent a letter to the University of Missouri protesting that such things were allowed to happen even in the state next to his.

Actually, the senator's problem is bigger. Gregory has given the talk on 320 campuses in 10 months and he has sold nearly a million copies of a somewhat milder recorded version of that talk delivered at Southhampton (N.Y.) college. (Dick Gregory: The Light Side, The Dark Side, Poppy records, $6.95).

The picture of 320 young, talented college audiences electrified (either negatively or positively) over the thought of the niggers burnin' down the town in the name of the Declaration of Independence makes The Speech of more than ordinary interest.

Even technically, preachers who can't reach the young might be curious about a speech on morality that holds college and high school kids for two hours and 15 minutes. And—as happened in Kansas City—has some protesting "No" when Gregory indicates he has to stop soon.

And the morbidly curious might wonder about next riot season. Will these hundreds of young audiences be burnin' down the town—or practising the nonviolence that Gregory himself espouses?

'Five years old, I knew about whore, dope peddler'

roller coaster gaining altitude for the last, emotional plunge.

He speaks in drawls and sharp staccato bursts delivered in a St. Louis ghetto accent that appears to thicken when he rams home a point he knows is offensive to whites.

Early on, there are traces of the old Gregory night-club patter of one liners. Like the following adivce to the Catholics of North Ireland, they are topical and relatively cool:

"If they gonna overcome and have a smashin' victory over the Protestants, they gonna hafta start actin' more like black folks.

"They gonna hafta quit all that damn lootin' and burnin'.

"Pull theirself up by their bootstraps.

"Go on out and get 'em some damn jobs.

"One thing them Irish Catholics got to learn, they got to learn how to be patient—they movin' too damn fast.

"Tha's right, tell 'em Harlem wasn't built in a day, baby!"

Gregory quickly establishes his liberal credentials by praising some of his white heroes (Bertrand Russell, Father James Groppi), and by sympathizing with whites victimized by their own "stinkin' white racist system" (cops who may get killed enforcing a no-knock entry law, white Mississippi kids who will have even poorer schools if their parents build an expensive, separate system).

Then he proceeds to mercilessly educate his white audience—and delight his black one—by taking them on a bitter, emotional tour of what seems like every black grievance in the book. For instance:

● Whites who condemn blacks for dirtying up the ghetto.

Black folks dirty up the ghetto as a protest against something they hate, says Gregory; what's your excuse? If fouling up the landscape makes me a nigger, at the rate you white folks have polluted the air, the ocean, the world and are now starting on the moon— "That makes you the super-nigger, baby!"

● White criticism of black rioting and looting.

"You white folks get upset when the riot starts and a nigger breaks in a store and get him a television set and take it home with him. Everybody say: 'I don't know why they act like that.'

"I tell you why they act like that — readin' our damn history.

"Hell, you goin' gimme a white history book, with pride, talkin' 'bout how you white folks got on that stranger's ship and dumped all that man's tea in the water?

"Humph. What the hell you mad at us for? Cause a nigger got enough sense to take it home with him?"

● Fred Hampton and the Panthers.

"If you want to see when they started killin' Panthers and when they started pullin' all them Hitler tactics on 'em, it's not when they said 'Get guns.' You can deal with a gun, baby! It's when those Black Panthers started goin' into the black community feedin' hungry black folks That's what they scared of." (Shouts of "Right on!")

'I got too much culture In that stinkin' ghetto'

If you whites, says Gregory, want to lump the Panthers together with the Ku Klux Klan, the Mafia and the Minutemen, O.K. But then you've got to ask yourself why the police don't kick their way into the apartments of the Klan, the Mafia and the Minutemen and kill them in their sleep. His answer: because the others don't want to change an unjust social system.

● Whites who advise blacks to be non-violent.

"You know how insultin' it is when white folks tell us to be nonviolent? The only country of the history of the world that's dropped an atom bomb on another human being has now asked the niggers to behave—you've got to be outa your mind." (Slowly, turning the knife.)

"Nonviolence? White Americans shouldn't be permitted to use the word as long as there's one Indian brother locked on that reservation.

"'Cause, dig it baby, you can not be no more nonviolent than our Indian brother's been for the last 75 years."

Still, Gregory's talk is directed finally to blacks—purging them of fears and unmentionable wounds.

With wet-eyed laughter still dying out in the background, Gregory abruptly drags his audience into the raw ghetto memories that were his—and some of theirs:

"So we say we tired of a white racist system.

"We're tired of white folks runnin' around talkin' about ghetto folks is culturally deprived, Naw baby, I'm not culturally deprived. I came up in one of them black ghettoes.

"Five years old, I knew what a whore look like, watched her turn her trick.

"Five years old, I knew what the dope pusher look like.

"Five years old, I knew what the bookie and the pimp and the hustler look like. (The murmurs begin: "Yeah.")

"Five years old, I knew what the junkie look like, at five years old.

"Naw baby, I'm not culturally deprived, thanks to this stinkin' black ghetto you forced me in (the words like acid) I got too much culture.

"I had so much culture that when I finally went to your white orientated schools and you tried to teach me how to read with that old simple book, Jane and the Third Reader . . . What the hell I want to read about some old simple white girl feedin' a dog, when I'm lookin' at whores turn tricks?

"Too much. Too much culture. Think about it for a minute.

"Five years old in the black ghetto I saw the pimp, I saw the whore, I saw her turn tricks, I saw the junkie, I saw the bookie, I saw the dope pusher.

"And at five years old, I also saw the police. And dig it baby, the police, the bookie, the junkie, the dope pusher, was all smilin' and talkin' together. Dig it good baby, dig it good.

"And now white America asks black folks to respect the police.

"You respect those police out in the suburbs, baby, that act like police, and let us treat these heathens like they supposed to be treated. That's what we talkin' about."

He continues over a rising cry of rage from the audience, his words bitter, chopping.

"As long as there's a nigger in the ghetto that's a detriment to black folks your white racist police system won't do one thing to curb him.

"When's the last time you ever heard there was a pimp was gunned down, or a dope pusher? But the minute Martin Luther King and the Black Panthers and all these beautiful cats talk about upliftin' black folks you send that white racist police system in the black ghetto to kill every one of 'em and put 'em in jail."

His voice low, growling, like a threatening German Shepherd:

"We goin' stop it because we tired of it!" (Surging cheers.)

"The syndicate can run all the policy and all gamblin' they want to run in the nigger neighborhood and you don't get uptight over it. All the dope . . .

"Them black kids been havin' dope for the last 20 years and now that white kids got it you gettin' upset. You shoulda known if you let them sick bastards (interruped more and more by cries of rage) give it to my kids they'll give it to yours."

And the moving thing is: The roar from the black audience tells you more than Gregory's words.

But despite all the bitterness in a Gregory talk — and there's enough of it to kink your hair — his final appeal is to reason and even beyond, to nonviolence.

In a low-keyed pitch, Gregory tells the students he's not telling anybody else what to do, but for his part he's convinced violence won't solve anything.

Apathetic About Demonstrations?

By ART STOTT

You pick up your paper and almost every day you see an account of someone staging a demonstration, planning a demonstration or dealing with the results of a demonstration. Some are violent, some are peaceful, some zero in on issues of immense importance, some are inconsequential. But at this stage, overexposure has made the technique decreasingly effective. Pretty soon we can expect a royal commission on demonstrations, or at least a Canada Council grant to support research on this popular mass procedure of the day.

Stott

Perhaps research is required. Demonstrations can claim a large expenditure in time, effort and energy. If that time, effort and energy were devoted to a constructive purpose, society might benefit. The "march for millions" illustrated the point. Literally thousands participated in what, in principle, was a demonstration channelled in a way to raise funds for humanitarian purposes. Those participating weren't against something. They were for something—and the positive approach won more public support than any comparable mass activity of recent years here.

The Boy Scouts, when groups of them undertake a beach clean-up, are staging a particular type of demonstration, making the shore safer by ridding it of broken glass and other rubbish. Outdoors groups which collect litter and deposit it where it should be deposited are staging demonstrations. The work bees that have grubbed out and tidied up parts of Colquitz Creek are demonstrating in a pretty effective way. So are a large number of other organized activities aimed at improving the environment or making living more pleasant for the public as a whole.

A lot of the demonstrations against certain evils seem good in principle. The largest I have ever seen started at Aldermaston on the Easter weekend of 1960 and wound up in London's Trafalgar Square. Huge crowds there protested against the atomic bomb. As a result of this demonstration have we rid the earth of the atomic bomb and its "refinements"?

Locally, the other week, we had people demonstrating against passage of cars through Beacon Hill Park. The asserted objective was to rid that area of traffic hazards for pedestrians, young and old, and to eliminate the smell of exhaust fumes—splendid objectives in themselves. But some of us were left wondering how many of the demonstrators had contributed in any way—specifically through taxes—to the creation and maintenance of Beacon Hill Park, and if they hadn't, did they have any justification for keeping taxpaying citizens in cars out of the area? We wondered, also, how many of the demonstrators contributed to air pollution by driving or riding in cars elsewhere in the vicinity—or if that was different.

The stupidity of violence or threats of violence in a demonstration is pretty well recognized. Violence or threats of violence breed counteracting violence or threats of violence. And what do cracked heads prove? Similarly, obscenity as a demonstration weapon is more damaging to the one using it than to his intended target. You can't wallow in sewage without smelling like something other than violets.

Arguments have been made for nihilism—and some of them are cogent. But unless something better is substituted for what has been rejected or destroyed, the concept seems desolate.

An argument can also be advanced for the special-interest demonstration. How else, ask its protagonists, can we draw attention to our plight? The question is relevant. The answer, though, might be by demonstrating in a constructive way, by showing that the demonstrator recognizes not only his own narrow self-interest, but also his potential for contributing usefully to society.

Is that suggestion unrealistically altruistic, demanding too much of people? Perhaps. But the public, that generalized collection of individuals with their own strengths and weaknesses, grows apathetic to the format of demonstrations against this and that. Apathy, in many cases, can be transformed into hostility.

The same public, on the other hand, usually shows appreciation for the efforts of any group that demonstrates a willingness to help others—witness again the "march for millions."

Perhaps rehabilitation of the demonstration as an effective influence lies in that course.

BUSINESS and FINANCE

Editor: G. S. Kent

Kaiser Resources

High operating costs and start-up expenses contributed to a net deficit in the first quarter of 1970, reports Kaiser Resources Ltd.

Vice-president and general manager Gerald E. Balsley said the net loss, consolidated, amounted to $486,000, which was anticipated with development of the company's new Elkview mining and coal preparation facilities near Sparwood.

Although old facilities also being used have higher operating costs, it was expected the start-up costs of new facilities would be overcome in the current quarter.

Hudson's Bay

Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas Co. Ltd. reports net earnings for the first three months of 1970 of $5.38 million or 27 cents a share.

President L. J. Richards told shareholders this compared with net earnings of $5.5 million or 28 cents a share in the first quarter last year.

He said the drop this year was caused by the fact that no provision was made for income tax to March 31, 1969, compared with $1 million this year.

Great Canadian

Great Canadian Oil Sands Ltd., which is developing the oil sands at Fort McMurray, Alta., reports a loss of $5.2 million for the first quarter of the year on revenue of $7.4 million.

The loss for the first quarter last year was $8.6 million on revenue of $5.34 million.

President Kenneth Heddon said equipment problems of late 1969 carried over into the new year and adversely affected production during January.

Great Canadian reported a 1969 loss of $25.5 million.

Chrysler

Chrysler Copr., first of the auto firms to report first-quarter finances, said it lost $29.4 million in that period, compared with net earning of $48 million in the same three months last year.

Chrysler's report reflected what the firm called generally lower consumer demand for automotive products in the U.S. and Canada.

Chrysler, third-largest of the auto firms, said its first-quarter sales totalled $1.5 billion compared with $1.7 billion in the same period a year ago.

Hitachi Sales Corporation of Canada Ltd. Appointment

HENRY GALLER

Shunichi Kajii, President of Hitachi Sales Corporation of Canada Ltd., is pleased to announce the appointment of Henry Galler, C.A. as Vice-President of the company. Mr. Galler was formerly chief executive officer of one of Canada's foremost electronic manufacturing companies.

Strike Blamed for Drop In Air Canada's Profits

OTTAWA (CP) — Air Canada reported Tuesday a 1969 net income of $1,548,000 after taxes compared with $8,184,000 in 1968.

The airline's annual report, tabled in the Commons by Transport Minister Don Jamieson, attributed the "financially disappointing year" to the strike by the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, more flights by charter carriers on the North Atlantic route, rising costs and a slowing down of the Canadian economy.

Operating revenues rose four per cent to $404,652,000 while expenses increased by seven per cent to $386,188,000.

The strike which grounded the 112-plane fleet for a month, lost Air Canada about $40,000,000 in revenue, chairman Yves Pratte said in the report. Even after operations resumed, it was found that a substantial volume of summer traffic had been lost to other carriers.

The company's return on investment was 4.8 per cent last year compared with 6.3 per cent in 1968.

The airline carried 6,400,000 passengers on scheduled services, an increase of one per cent. Revenue passenger miles totalled 5,700,000,000, an increase of two per cent.

CHARTER REVENUE UP

The report said revenues from charter operations increased by 73 per cent to $8,837,000 over the 1968 figure. During the coming summer, four DC-8s will be used for charter flights, mainly on the North Atlantic, compared with two last year.

Pratte said that by 1971 the company hopes to be operating a number of additional routes to the U.S. after bilateral negotiations between Ottawa and Washington. Service to Prague will start this spring. The airline now serves 62 places.

Air Canada's scheduled passenger traffic on the North Atlantic declined by seven per cent last year compared with a 13-per-cent increase the previous year.

Wages for the line's 17,138 employees went up eight per cent, accounting for 42 per cent of the total increase in operating costs.

Air Canada will add 10 jets to its fleet in 1970 at a cost of $96,000,000. By 1972, it will have three 365-seat Boeing 747s and six of the ten 270-seat Lockheed TriStars on order.

Forestry Firms Show Sales Drop

Two of B.C.'s major forestry firms report substantial drops in first quarter performance due to government-inspired restraint policies and depressed markets.

Crown Zellerback Canada Ltd. reported first-quarter earnings of $2 million down considerably from the $3 million in earnings for the same period in 1969.

President Robert G. Rogers told the annual meeting Tuesday a depressed lumber market and continued inflation contributed to bringing down the earnings, despite good sales for the three months of $43.4 million. Sales for the same period in 1969 were slightly higher at $43.44 million.

LOWER DEMANDS

A year ago the lumber and plywood market was booming and prices were at record levels, Rogers said, but now the company faces lower demands and price levels comparable to those of 10 years ago.

Weldwood of Canada Ltd. reports first-quarter sales were down to $29.38 million from $33.4 million.

Roger Montgomery, president and chief executive officer, told shareholders at the company's annual meeting Tuesday that profit figures for the first three months were not yet final but would be only a fraction of those for the corresponding period last year.

Montgomery blamed the company's reduction in sales and earnings on Canadian and United States government "anti-inflationary policies."

CZ earlier reported year-end earnings for 1969 of $13.78 million based on record sales of $205 million. Earnings in 1968 were $12.77 million.

Referring to wage negotiations now underway with the International Woodworkers of America, Rogers said although companies must offer top wages to attract the best people to the forest industry, "it is clear that 1970 is shaping up as a year when moderation and restraint are vitally necessary to keep our economy on an even keel."

Of pollution control, Rogers said the quality of man' environment has become a major public concern but the time has come when people "must concentrate on solutions — constructive plans, on action."

He said CZ has spent or appropriated $2 million on air pollution abatement at Elk Falls kraft pulp mill and will spend $2 million more for air and water quality controls.

Montgomery said 1969 was a year of "severe disruption and turmoil" and said the softwood lumber market collapsed in May and June and the softwood plywood market shortly after.

"Lumber prices on the Atlantic Seaboard of the United States, one of our large markets, dropped by approximately $50 per thousand board feet within the space of 60 days in June and July of 1969."

$4.7 Million Loan To Canadian Pacific

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — The United States Export-Import Bank has announced a $4,725,000 loan to the Canadian Pacific Railway to help finance the purchase of two Boeing 727 jet aircraft.

The railway will lease the aircraft to Canadian Pacific Airlines Ltd., its wholly-owned subsidiary, for use on its domestic service.

Total cost of the planes is $13,100,000.

The loan will be repaid in 14 semi-annual instalments beginning in November, 1971, with interest of six per cent.

Mercedes-Benz examines the relationship of man to his automobile. Offers a few facts. and a conclusion.

WILL most people eventually buy whatever car meets their particular needs most exactly, at the lowest cost per mile?

Undoubtedly, this is a growing trend. As a man's discretionary income grows, he is no longer inclined to throw most of it into a bigger home and a more expensive car — as the burgeoning sales of boats, snowmobiles, skis and travel tickets testify.

Mercedes-Benz will probably not suffer from this trend. Indications are that many Mercedes-Benz owners buy the car not because it is in their price bracket but because it is skilfully engineered and carefully put together. Because it is tasteful and functional.

Eighty-five per cent of Mercedes-Benz owners recently surveyed own watches which cost at least $100. Our conjecture is that this kind of man buys a good watch because he knows it is precisely made and will last a long time. And he feels it is in good taste. Whether other people know it is an expensive watch is irrelevant: so is the fact that a cheaper way of telling the time would be to buy a $10 watch every year.

They get satisfaction from feeling an exact response to the merest flick of the wheel, as compared to the vague reaction of normal power steering.

They derive feelings of confidence and serenity from sitting in a seat that fits snugly and offers firm support because orthopedic surgeons helped design it — a seat that feels as though it belongs in a car rather than in a club or a living room.

They gain satisfaction from living with automobile styling that combines function and good taste in time-defying fashion. (The body of the 280S shown above was introduced in 1967: it looks undated today and will, we believe, continue to do so.)

Our conclusion: the purchase of a fine automobile such as the Mercedes-Benz will become passé only when man loses his aesthetic sense.

Rugged Lifesaving Trail Is Coast's First Park

BUFFER ZONE to protect the 50-mile West Coast trail from logging will help to ensure the area will retain its wilderness nature and will not look like this Brown's Bay section of the trail. Walking a plank across a muddy area of the trail is federal Indian Affairs and Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien and Esquimalt-Saanich MP David Anderson.

SURPRISE for Jean Chretien during a walk along the West Coast trail was running across Carl Edgar in the process of making a dugout canoe from a huge cedar log. The minister of Indian affairs and northern development and Esquimalt-Saanich MP David Anderson hiked along the trail to Clo-oose Tuesday before signing the agreement making the trail a national park.

LAND-BUYING BEGINS

Stories and Photos By Humphry Davy

The provincial government will move immediately to acquire privately-owned property within Canada's first west coast park.

The park to take in Long Beach, the Effingham Islands in Barkley Sound and the 50-mile life-saving trail, was established Tuesday with the signing of a formal agreement between Recreation Minister Kenneth Kiernan and federal Indian Affairs and Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien.

Kiernan estimated that between $4 million and $6 million will be needed to obtain privately-owned lands, mostly all located in the Long Beach area.

The cost would be shared by the provincial and federal governments, he said.

He hoped to have all the land deals completed by 1971.

"It will mean lots of work for the department," he said. "I may have to engage extra staff."

The newly-established park will have 25 miles of shoreline facing the open Pacific at Long Beach, plus five miles on sheltered Browning Passage and four miles on nearby Kennedy Lake, and 50 miles of Pacific coastline between Bamfield and Port Renfrew.

Kiernan estimated the value of the parklands in excess of $23 million.

But he pointed out most of the property situated within the park boundary is already crown land.

In signing the agreement, Chretien said the new park would be a great asset to the national parks system and would become a great tourist attraction in B.C.

"But I'm just as happy that it now belongs forever to the people of Canada rather than to some American citizens."

Chretien went on to explain that acquisition of choice recreational lands by wealthy Canadians and Americans is a problem across Canada.

David Anderson, Liberal MP for Esquimalt-Saanich who was present for the signing, warned British Columbians against complacency.

"We shouldn't rest on our laurels," he said. "This is an excellent start in the face of tremendous pressure by Americans to acquire property here."

He said the newly-established park should be regarded as the first step towards establishment of a real parks system to meet the future needs of Vancouver Island.

The park boundaries as established in the agreement are 25 miles of beach fronting the Pacific at Long Beach, running from Cox Point southeasterly to Portland Point, Schooner Cove, Wickaninnish Bay, Quisitis Point, Florencia Bay and Wya Point.

On the inside of the peninsula the shoreline runs five miles to Browning Passage. There are four miles of shoreline on Kennedy Lake.

The trail from the north starts at Mills Point and includes Cape Beale, Kenna Bay, Pachena Bay and Pachena Point.

The width of the boundary for the trail has yet to be determined, but it will include Cheewhat Lake about four miles inland from Clo-oose.

'We Must Preserve Coast Wilderness'

If Quebec-born Jean Chretien doesn't watch out, he will become a breast-beating British Columbian before he knows it.

Since his appointment in 1968, the federal minister for Indian affairs and northern development has climbed mountains in B.C., skied in Garibaldi Park, fished in the Strait of Georgia, and on Tuesday hiked along a portion of the historic West Coast lifesaving trail which became part of a national park on the same day.

And he didn't go because he had to.

It was a last-minute venture arranged by David Anderson, MP for Esquimalt-Saanich, when the minister arrived in Victoria Monday afternoon.

Chretien's sole reason for being here was to sign into existence with the provincial government the west coast national park.

Anderson put it up to him. Did he want to familiarize himself with the trail before signing the agreement later in the day?

He jumped at the idea.

And so on Tuesday morning, he hiked to Clo-oose and back — about eight miles — after being flown to the mouth of Nitinat Lake.

On the trip were Anderson, his brother Malcolm, John Ray, Chretien's parliamentary assistant, Karl Spreitz, TV cameraman, and myself.

They say hiking reveals the inner man.

In the case of Chretien it did.

Here he was walking in borrowed boots, somewhat too snug, wearing his suit trousers and a borrowed windbreaker.

At times he waded through six inches of mire and balanced on a rotten piece of timber spanning a portion of the trail.

He was observant and never ceased to wonder at the tall trees, the native plants, the beaches and rocky promontaries by the sea.

When the party paused for a rest at the five-mile long Clo-oose beach, Chretien was sold on the park.

"We must preserve the wilderness aspects of this coast — as it is — unspoilt by the hand of man," he said. "Other generations must see it as it is.

"I must also try to get other ministers and Prime Minister Trudeau to see this part of the coast. They would enjoy it."

The more we walked with Chretien the more we became impressed with this man from La Belle Province — his lack of pretentions, love of freedom and his tolerance.

He was walking to get the feel of the country.

He said no man can get to know a region from the air or from the roadside.

He is fond of B.C. Victoria had character like Quebec City, he said.

Bilingualism was the order of the day on the trail.

The minister spoke in English, and Ray, his assistant, and Dave Anderson, replied in French automatically. As a native of Quebec, I happily joined in.

Hours later after he had signed the park agreement in the office of Recreation Minister Kenneth Kiernan, he was asked if he thought it would be a good idea to dedicate the national park during B.C.'s centennial celebrations next year.

Chretien obviously was not thinking of the celebrations.

"Yes," he replied. "It would provide me with an opportunity to come to British Columbia."

Arabs Learning To Solve Their Problems

By DANA ADAMS SCHMIDT

BEIRUT, Lebanon (NYT) — In the Arab Middle East it is usually taken for granted that the greater political problems, such as the Arab-Israeli conflict, are never solved. One just learns to live with them.

But in these early spring days, three Middle Eastern problems — not quite so great as the Arab-Israeli dispute but still major concerns — are apparently moving towards solution. They are the problems of Bahrein, the Kurds and Yemen.

In the Shiekdom of Bahrein, Vittorio Winspeare Guiccardi, the representative of Secretary General Thant of the United Nations, has been conducting hearings for a week to ascertain the wishes of the people.

The mission, requested by Britain and Iran, has been welcomed in Arab capitals as likely to produce a report that Iran would be able to use as a face-saving device to cover the dropping of her claim to Baharein, which dates from 1869. Less than 10 per cent of the island's population of 20,000 is now Iranian.

OPINION SURVEY

By establishing the facts of Bahrein's national composition and the wishes of its inhabitants, Buiccardi could help avoid the danger of confrontation between Iran and the Arab states.

In Baghdad, the Iraqi Government has been moving purposefully toward carrying out the terms of its declaration of March 11 for solving the problem of the Kurdish people within the Iraqi state. The Kurds, a nationality that claims descent from the ancient Aryans, number about two million in Iraq.

Five Kurdish ministers have been appointed and taken office in Baghdad. The appointment of a Kurdish vice-president, one of three vice-presidents, is expected soon and the appointment of a Kurd as commander of one of Iraq's five army divisions.

Kurdish sources confirmed that the Iraqi Army had begun to withdraw from positions in northern Iraq, where most Kurds live. The plans are to leave only a token force and a garrison in the northern city of Kirkuk.

RIGHTS HONORED

A new provisional constitution has been drafted incorporating recognition of kurdish autonomy, including cultural and economic rights. The Kurds and Iraqis had fought sporadically for eight and a half years.

One difficult test still to be passed is the formation of a new national council, to include Kurds, that is to share legislative powers with the Revolutionary Command Council, the state's highest ruling body.

Moves toward ending the seven-year-old Yemeni civil war grew out of last month's conference of Islamic foreign ministers in Jidda, Saudi Arabia.

King Faisal took the occasion to allow the flag of Republican Yemen to fly in Saudi Arabia for the first time. He received the republican Premier, Mohsen Ali-Aini, and the King's senior adviser, Dr. Rashad Pharoun, and the King spent hours in conference with Aini.

MILITARY COUP

The civil war followed an Egyptian-supported army coup on Sept. 26, 1962. The Imam, or ruler, Mohamad al-Badr, was ousted. He combined his appeal as a religious leader with Saudi Arabian money to get royalist tribes to fight the Republic and an Egyptian force. The Egyptians left in 1967, and the Saudis stopped backing the royalists.

As a result of the meetings in Saudi Arabia, the republican Government in Sana is planning a national reconciliation conference, not as a meeting between royalist and republican delegations, but entirely within the framework of the Republic. Royalists would attend only as individuals and members of the former ruling family would be excluded.

There was talk in Sana of appointing some prominent royalists — but not members of the royal family — to important positions if they would co-operate with the Republic. The losers in the projected solution in Yemen would be the Imam and the princess of the royal family.

All in all, the Arabs seem to be putting their house in order.

Soviet Chief Attacks China, West

MOSCOW (AP) — Communist party chief Leonid Brezhnev assailed China and the West Tuesday as foes of communism, but he offered conciliatory negotiations with both.

At about the same time, Peking blasted the Soviet government and called for its overthrow.

In a 3¼-hour speech honoring Vladimir Ilych Lenin, the founder of modern communism, on the 100th anniversary of his birth, Brezhnev lashed out at the Western world, declaring:

"Imperialism . . . is in our day inseparable from crimes such as wars of aggression, flagrant interference in the life of other countries and peoples, and the brutality of racists and colonialists."

But in another part of the wide-ranging speech, he called for peaceful co-existence.

"We shall continue our active effort to halt the arms race, which is ruinous to the peoples, secure disrmament and get outstanding issues between states settled in a reasonable foundation, by negotiation."

PRINCIPLES

As for the Soviet dispute with China, he said:

"This situation is obviously the fruit of the nationalistic policy of the Chinese leadership and the result of its rupture with the principles laid down by Lenin.

"The enemies of socialism are the only ones who benefit by the virulent anti-Soviet campaign that has been conducted in China during the last few years."

The Soviet Union, he said, favors "the restoration of good relations between Socialist countries wherever they have been broken."

In Peking, the Communist Chinese government marked Lenin's anniversary with an 18,000-word editorial attack accusing the Kremlin of disgracing the Communist founder's homeland.

It urged the Soviet people to topple Brezhnev and his fellow "revisionists." The editorial in official Chinese newspapers was broadcast by Radio Peking.

A Chinese delegation was absent from the Kremlin's Palace of Congresses as about 6,000 Communists from the Soviet Union and abroad assembled.

Spiro Said Cool Toward Press Freedom

NEW YORK (AP) — William F. Schmick Jr., president of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, said Tuesday that many United States politicians, including Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew and Attorney-General John N. Mitchell, are less than ardent supporters of the First Amendment to the U.S. constitution which guarantees freedom of the press.

In a speech to the 84th annual meeting of the ANPA here, Schmick said the "drift and tone of Mr. Agnew's speeches—the thrust, to borrow his word—can hardly be squared with an instinctive unqualified respect for freedom of the press; nor can Attorney-General John Mitchell's statement following attempts to subpoena news tapes, films and unedited files and reporters' notebooks."

Schmick, publisher of the Baltimore Sun, said he did not regard Agnew's criticism of newspapers as "a deliberate attack on the freedom of the press."

However, he said there was "conclusive" evidence of attempts at government encroachment on the broadcasting and newspaper fields and urged publishers to be watchful that "the broad application of the term 'press' to broadcast media and newspapers alike does not result in any government regulation of newspapers comparable to government regulation of broadcasting."

Parochial Schools Perishing

Students Dwindling And Costs Climbing

By BOB MITCHELL
An Analysis

Rising costs and shrinking enrolments continue to put more parochial schools in B.C. out of operation each year.

In February, parishioners who send their children to Sacred Heart Elementary on McKenzie Avenue decided it would be financially impossible to continue operating the school, and announced it would not re-open next September.

Enrolment at the school has declined from 280 to 110 in the last 10 years.

In Kamloops last month members of Sacred Heart Parish voted 72 per cent in favor of terminating secondary classes at co-educational St. Ann's Academy.

The problem again was financial, and the solution will involve dumping 233 secondary students into Kamloops public schools next September.

The precarious financial state of local parochial schools came dramatically to light in 1968 with the hotly-debated decision to close the 104-year-old St. Louis College.

Bishop Remi de Roo said then:

"The problem is not could we save enough to save St. Louis. The problem is, are we going to rally fast enough to save the rest of the schools?"

Since then Sacred Heart has gone under, while elementary classes at St. Ann's Academy on Humboldt — the oldest non-public school in B.C. — are being phased out one grade a year in anticipation of expansion of St. Joseph's Hospital.

The future of the high school adjacent to the academy is still up in the air, depending on hospital plans.

That leaves three other elementary schools — St. Josephs, St. Patrick's and St. Andrew's (formerly St. Louis College) — still operating in the area.

Msgr. Michael O'Connell last week discussed some of the reasons behind closing of parochial schools.

"There's an opinion I do have," O'Connell said. "It's that we've been priced out of education."

He estimated that sometime "far in the future" parochial school education would be offered only to children from affluent families.

Even now it's more difficult for people of "average means" to pay tuition fees than it was 20 and 30 years ago, O'Connell said.

In the past, the low-cost labor of teaching nuns enabled Catholic schools to operate with modest tuition fees. But in recent years there has been a sharp drop in the number of nuns available for teaching duty.

As a result Catholic schools have had to hire more and more lay teachers. In 1968-69 lay teachers outnumbered nuns for the first time in parochial schools in the United States.

Since lay teachers cost four to six times as much as nuns, the cost of staffing some schools has soared. And tuition fees have been raised to keep up with salaries.

A spokesman for the Sacred Heart school board who did not wish to be identified said the decision to not re-open in September was the indirect result of the intention of three nuns on staff to leave their order in June.

The spokesman said the board would have had to hire three more lay teachers and in the process would have had to boost basic fees from $25 to $40 per family.

The Sacred Heart spokesman said having three highly qualified sisters on staff enabled the school to get by with less-qualified — cheaper — lay teachers, who as a rule get jobs in parochial schools while awaiting an opening in the public system.

But there are other factors besides the financial squeeze, said Msgr. O'Connell. There has been a steady decline in enrolments in recent years as parents withdraw their children from parochial schools.

"I think the Catholic people are still very concerned about religious training for their children," said O'Connell, "but it's like any other situation: you have to weigh your priorities."

Some parents decided their children would be better off at public schools which are often better-equipped than parochial schools. These same parents are shouldering the burden of their children's religious indoctrination.

"Parents generally speaking feel a greater sense of responsibility for the religious education of their children than formerly, and a lot of these parents have been assuming that responsibility in the home."

O'Connell said the attraction of parochial school education sometimes depends on whether children are taught by a nun or by a lay teacher.

"So if you're having a tough time financially and there's no sister, that's just one more motivation to send your children to public schools."

Gordon Hall of the St. Andrew's school board said the school has two nuns and six lay teachers on the staff.

Hall said school operating costs are paid for by fees and an annual $20,000 subsidy from the parish of St. Andrew's. The school anticipates a slight boost in enrolment with the closing of Sacred Heart.

The big question for public school boards is how to accommodate students from parochial schools that close on short notice.

At Kamloops last month it was learned local secondary schools could absorb 233 students from St. Ann's Academy, but trustees decided to ask the provincial government to start supporting independent schools anyway.

In Victoria last week trustee Peter Bunn, chairman of the Greater Victoria board's building and grounds committee, said the board is looking into the possibility of setting up a portable school on Rogers Road for an estimated 60 to 70 youngsters from Sacred Heart.

Portable classrooms would be brought from Fairburn elementary in Gordon Head. The board has rejected an offer to take over Sacred Heart for a $1,000 monthly rent.

It looks like large numbers of students will continue to leave parochial schools to enroll in public schools for years to come.

In the United States the National Catholic Education Association estimated 4.9 million students enrolled at Catholic elementary and secondary schools last September. That compares with 5,033,000 during 1968-69 and 5,255,000 the year before.

Catholic leaders say the only hope for bailing out the parochial system is through federal and state grants.

Closer to home they point out the only two provincial governments which do not recognize separate schools are those of B.C. and Manitoba.

'We've Been Priced Out of Education'

Low Income Families Get Rent Break

Tenants of Blanshard Court and other public housing projects in Canada—especialy working mothers and larger families—will get a better break through new rental scales announced Tuesday in Ottawa.

Municipal housing officials were enthusiastic, but at the provincial level officials said there had been no discussion of the change prior to the announcement by Robert Andras, the minister responsible for housing.

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell commented:

"One thing is certain. Greater subsidies will mean a greater deficit to be picked up by the taxpayers. We don't know how the plan is going to be implemented or how the deficit costs will be shared."

His views were echoed by J. Everett Brown, chairman of the B..C Housing Management Commission.

Under the present cost-sharing scheme, which has been in effect since the Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. introduced it in the 1950s, cities or municipalities have picked up 12½ per cent of the deficit, a similar amount has been paid by provincial governments, and the remainder by the federal government.

LONG OVERDUE

Bill Hooson, urban renewal co-ordinator for Victoria, greeted the adjustment of the rental scale with enthusiasm.

"This has been long overdue. Tenants in public housing have been stuck with fixed income ceilings that have become outdated since the scale was first set in the early 50s."

The revised rent scheme would:

—Reduce from 30 to 25 per cent the maximum proportion of a tenant's income to be paid in rent;

—Lower the minimum proportion for tenants at the bottom income level from 16.7 to 14.4 per cent;

—Reduce rents of large families by $2 a month for each child after the first two;

—Increase to $900 from $250 the amount a working mother may earn before her income starts counting as part of family income total used in figuring the rent;

—Allow one-parent families to deduct $900 from the annual income used to determine rent;

—Require tenants to declare income only once every two years.

Hooson said that tenants now have to declare incomes every month.

"When their income goes up this causes an abrupt dislocation when it's above the maximum allowed. It means they have to relocate within three months."

WORKING MOTHERS

He applauded the announcement's recognition of the necessity for working mothers.

"At long last the working mothers are going to get a break. Their expenses should be deductible. When a woman goes out to work, apart from baby sitters, there are expenses, such as bus fares, hair-dos and new clothes. She has to start gussying herself up a bit if she wants to hold on to her job."

In his announcement, Andras said that low-income families waiting to get into public housing units would also get a break. A total of 27,500 units were built in 1969. This would be upped to 35,000 in 1970.

Andras added that the total of the two years' program was equal to 75 per cent of all production in the past 20 years.

FINAL FAREWELLS were made to Vice-Admiral J. C. O'Brien today as he left HMC Dockyard after his last official visit as maritime commander. O'Brien hands over command to Rear-Admiral H. A. Porter July 7, before heading for Rome where he will become the first Canadian commandant of the NATO Defence College.

Runaway Sparks Clash

The chairman of the Greater Victoria juvenile detention home committee charged today that Eric Martin Institute for psychiatric care refused to re-admit a 14-year-old runaway overnight.

The charge was immediately denied by institute administrator Clifford Brown.

Detention home committee chairman, Saanich Ald. William Noel, said the youth was brought to the juvenile detention home on Pembroke Street by police after being found wandering in an occupied house.

When they learned his name and background, "police contacted the Eric Martin Institute and they refused to accept the boy back as a patient because he was automatically discharged if not back by midnight."

Brown replied that the youth was a voluntary patient, and did leave the institute which in turn notified the attending doctor who recommended the police be contacted to pick him up.

Brown said there may have been a misunderstanding because if a patient leaves and isn't back by midnight, "for the purposes of paperwork he is marked as absent. It is not a question of not being allowed to be admitted."

He said the youth now is being cared for by his own doctor who is arranging for his further treatment.

Noel said the log at the juvenile detention home recording the incident states that the youth was brought there at 12:30 a.m. and refused to give his name and address, after being found in someone's home.

Later he gave his name, said he was a patient at EMI and ran away at 3 p.m. Tuesday.

The log states that a Victoria city police constable "contacted EMI and was advised that the policy is that if a patient is not returned by midnight he is automatically discharged."

The youth's doctor was then phoned and he said the boy is a ward of the Catholic Children's Aid in Vancouver, but the juvenile detention home could find no such listing.

The Times was told this morning that the youth was charged in juvenile court with being unlawfully in someone's house, remanded at the juvenile detention home until Monday where he will have to be confined to a cell and locked up to keep him separate from other juveniles.

The Times was also told that the youth escaped from the Eric Martin Institute by cutting his way through a ceiling.

Brown confirmed this was the escape route, adding that some ceilings are "dropped" with suspended accoustic tile.

He emphasized that the youth was a voluntary patient at the hospital, not someone committed, so there is no authority to hold him against his will.

HELP HOSPITALS

Co-Ordination For Home Care

By DON VIPOND

Six organizations in Greater Victoria have joined hands to co-ordinate home care services for the ill or incapacitated.

No new services will be provided initially but for the first time people who require more than one form of health assistance in thier home will have a central office available to organize services.

The aim of home care services is to permit a patient to leave hospital earlier, give needed care to patients awaiting admission to hospital or nursing home and in some cases, provide enough help in the home to make admission to a hospital or nursing home unnecessary.

SAVE BEDS

"I'm convinced that if we have a good home care program we will be able to save some hospital beds," Dr. Andre Nyhof said Tuesday at a press conference detailing the new setup.

Groups which have worked together to establish the co-ordinating service include the Community Council of Greater Victoria, the Victorian Order of Nurses, Victoria Medical Society, Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health, Meals on Wheels and the Red Cross.

VON nurse Betty Short will staff the home care services office and Dr. Ruth Arnott of the health board's staff will act as consultant.

Home care services include bedside nursing, physiotherapy, occupational therapy, delivery of a hot meal daily and housekeeping assistance provided by Red Cross volunteers.

Bedside nursing may involve administering injections, bathing, changing dressings, instruction to family members on patient care or rehabilitation services.

50,000 VISITS

VON and health board nurses conducted about 50,000 home visits locally last year and the Red Cross about 1,200 home-making calls.

At this point the project isn't costing the taxpayer a dollar, said Garth Homer, executive director of the Community Council.

"We're going to experiment with an idea and see if it works."

The project is sound because it exploits to the maximum the services already established, he said.

An advisory committee will review progress and make recommendations after the program has been under way six months.

High Hazards Expected

Permits to start campfires and for land-clearing and debris-burning must be obtained as of May 1, the start of British Columbia's forest season, the B.C. Forest Service said today.

Campfire permits may be obtained from the Forest Service, Fish and Wildlife branch offices or sporting good stores.

Land burning permits are available from forest ranger and municipal offices.

Lorne F. Swannel, B.C.'s chief forester, said today fire hazards are expected to be high this spring and summer due to last winter's comparatively light snowfall.

"We expect dry conditions," he said. "Already we are drawing up plans to increase our normal fire fighting personnel and equipment in the event of a dry season."

The air tanker (water bomber) fleet was also being expanded with the addition of three modified A-26 twin-engined aircraft, he said. They would operate initially from Prince George to protect large timber stands in northern B.C.

One Way to See Red!

A resident of Oregon wants Mayor Courtney Haddock to invite the Russian and Red Chinese fleets to Victoria for a visit.

Marsh F. Beall, 15515 SE Meadowlark Lane, Portland, in a letter to the mayor says he feels such an invitation would be the ideal way to protest nerve gas shipments through the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

Beall said he is sure Haddock is as aware of the U.S. Army's "public be damned" attitude as the residents of Oregon.

If the Russian and Chinese fleets were invited to Victoria, Beall suggests, they could steam through the strait "and look over U.S. installations on the way."

"I am sure the U.S. Army would pose an objection and then the city of Victoria could take the same sort of attitude taken by the U.S. in the nerve gas case."

Arthur Mayse . . .

TODAY, A TRAVELLERS tale. The principals are Mr. and Mrs. Howard Elder of 5811 Sooke Road, who yearned to visit Japan and Expo 70, but wouldn't settle for the standard guided tour.

Their preparations began last fall when they enrolled in a Japanese conversation course on the Adult Education list.

Early this year, they put in for the required innoculation against smallpox. Since they would be pausing in Taiwan and Hong Kong, they followed advice and added anti-cholera shots.

Then, on March 1, they set out with their two children to discover Japan.

It was a good trip—so good that they hope to repeat it in some future year. Howard and Carol Elder told me about it on Tuesday afternoon in a living room that overlooks Sooke Harbor.

They had exchanged their Canadian funds in Tokyo airport at about 332 yen for a dollar, which was a better-than-average rate. From Tokyo, they had taken a super-fast train to Osaka.

Skipping the first bad-weather week of Expo 70, they had travelled the Inland Sea to sunny Kyushu, farthest south island of the archipelago. There they had seen orchards heavy with the little Japanese oranges that help make a Canadian Christmas.

At this point in what had begun as an orderly review of routes and stopovers, Howard pushed his map aside.

We could come back to it later. But right now, he would sooner remember the Mountie outside British Columbia's Expo pavilion whose most-used word is "Arimasen!"

The word, as he employs it, means, "This is forbidden." He speaks it politely but firmly to successive Japanese who spot B.C.'s upswept tiers of Douglas fir logs and joyously climb as high as they can at risk of their necks to get their pictures taken.

Inside the pavilion, the Elders got a warm welcome from Pam Gillan and Elva Starr, B.C. hostesses who were among their classmates in the Victoria language course. The two are staying with a Japanese family, and though sometimes a little homesick, are enjoying their adventure.

How about Expo 70 itself? Does it compare favorably with the Montreal world's fair?

The friendly Japanese asked that question too, Howard told me. The answer: Expo 70 on its compact site, is much different but very good. Its theme, "Progress and Harmony for Mankind," is very well worked out.

However, the progress of a Japanese grandmother through the crowds lacks something of harmony.

"Those little old ladies have sharp elbows," Howard recalled, "and they use them. As it was explained to us, grandma is bossed by her father if he's alive, her husband, her son and her son-in-law. She wouldn't get anywhere if she didn't shove."

But it's good-natured pushing, and in a densely populated land, the hearty boost serves a useful purpose.

A tip here to Expo-bound Westerners who would escape the densest throngs. Avoid rush-hour journeys. And if you would shorten your wait in the lineups outside the most popular pavilions, take advantage of the fact that Japanese go home early. Use the hours from 6 to 9 p.m.

However, Carol and Howard Elder weren't out to avoid crowds. They mixed and they mingled. They put the Japanese they had learned in Victoria to use, and where communication failed, they tossed in English or sign language.

Their linguistic ventures were approved by a good-humored people who like to laugh.

"We made mistakes, of course," Howard said, "and sometimes we were funny without meaning to be. It was puzzling to hear students giggle when we mentioned to a group that many young Canadians rode Hondas. We meant motorcycles. To them, the word means 'monkey'."

The visitors from Sooke found they could rely on Japan Travel Bureau's foreign section for thoroughgoing and accurate advice about routes and accommodation.

From Kyushu to the island of Hokkaido in the north, they chose to put up at country inns rather than Western-type hotels.

Wherever their rovings took them, they found cleanliness, complete honesty, and hospitality that became warmer when they identified themselves as Canadians.

They also found a country of contrasts. The dark business suit and the mini spoke of westernization. But the occasional kimona told of an older Japan, and street shoes were still changed for slippers in the home doorway.

Nothing Working For Cold Hawks

Bill WALKER

Then there is that horrible thought. Will the fact that Canada withdrew from this year's world hockey tournament have a bearing on the selection of the site for the 1976 Olympic Winter Games?

It could be, heaven forbid and if so it would be a shattering blow to the Vancouver Garibaldi Olympic Committee.

Canada's bid already is in for the 1976 winter Olympics at Whistler Moutain. And while there is yet another Canadian Olympic bid, from Montreal, for the summer games, it is felt that Garibaldi has the favored role, if only one is available.

Which is obviously the reason why the provincial government broke bread with VGOC officials and a noted international sports executive on Monday.

The visitor was J. F. "Bunny" Ahearne, president of the International Ice Hockey Federation.

Ahearne will be recalled, from among other sundry items, as having cast the tie-breaking vote that originally gave Canada the right to use nine professionals in world hockey. He said at the time "provided it meets with International Olympic Committee approval." That vote was later rescinded because the move did not meet with IOC sanction. Canada promptly dropped out of world hockey.

Rightly, or wrongly, Ahearne has been blamed for the whole fiasco.

This week he was in town for another, but allied purpose. He had been invited to discuss the VGOC bid, and to inspect Whistler Mountain in Garibaldi Park, proposed site of the '76 games.

Ahearne was spirited to B.C. on his way home from Japan. Hosts for the event here were Attorney-General Leslie Peterson and Minister Without Portfolio Mrs. Grace McCarthy.

It is Mrs. McCarthy who will represent the B.C. government at Amsterdam next month when official presentation is made to the IOC. Among others will be Mayor Tom Campbell of Vancouver, Jean Brussett, VGOC president, and John Fraser, immediate past president of the Olympic group.

"We were quite encouraged by Mr. Ahearne's visit," said Mrs. McCarthy, "and he said he was quite impressed by our committee's job."

"Naturally, we hope he will be impressed with Whistler," she added.

And indeed, it would be nice if Mr. Ahearne is impressed.

For it is his vote which will decide many other votes. He is the acknowledged czar of world hockey, and what he says, goes. He has ruled the international scene since 1933 when he loaned office space to the British Ice Hockey Association. And he has ruled supreme.

And he has almost single-handedly held that august body together in the intervening years and during the many crises that have been part and parcel of the scene.

This past year was no exception. Ahearne surprised everyone by siding with Canada on it's request to be allowed to use nine professionals. He later plugged an apparent loophole that would have given Canada the right to use reinstated professionals as well. And when the IOC complained of the taint of professionalism in the hockey setup, he ruled simply that the question of competing in a world tourney was up to the member teams. The vote went against Canada as the Europeans feared their Olympic eligibility would be affected if they played against the pros.

Canada wouldn't budge. The threat to quit was not an idle one. Neither would Ahearne. Neither would the other competing countries. And so Canada lost the tourney. Sweden got it. It was hardly a success. And when the Russians won, and Ahearne was presenting the medals, the mockery of the event was illustrated by the Swedish fans.

They chanted:

"Go, Canada, Go."

Suddenly, Canadians weren't bad guys any more. But they weren't in the world tournament any more, either. Nor were they in the Olympics. Which raises the problem.

President Earl Dawson of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association has said that Canada will ice an Olympic team in 1972, and would question the eligibility of every team it plays.

Ahearne replied by saying the IIHF would decide who went into the Olympics, and how the teams would be chosen. If a country misses a year in competition, it drops down a grade, and so on. Which is what Canada already has done. It now is in "B" group. It could drop to "C".

But what of the future? Is Canada really ready to ice an amateur team for the Olympics?

Ahearne has every right to be asking that question at Whistler, and Vancouver, and at Ottawa, this week.

For the winter Olympics include hockey, or as Ahearne was recently quoted:

"Wouldn't you say that by this one act of pulling out of the IIHF and criticizing the hypocrisy of the Olympics, Canada has alienated some Olympic votes?

In other words, Dawson and Hockey Canada can bear the full brunt of any adverse Olympic move at this time. That is the basis of Ahearne's charges.

But it isn't complete heresy. And there is cause.

Perhaps he does believe in B.C. and in Garibaldi. But he can be excused for suggesting that a Canadian Olympics without a Canadian team playing hockey in it, would not be wholly suited to the best interests of the sport he knows best. Or deserving of his vote.

And his honesty in this regard must be admired. For what would an Olympic Winter Games competition in Canada be without Canada against Russia in hockey? World hockey has centred on this confrontation for years. Ahearne admits it. This year's tourney in Sweden proved it.

Already the Whistler site has Canadian IOC approval and has been chosen by the International ski and luge federations as their choice from among such other places as Denver, Colo.; Ostersund, Sweden; and Switzerland.

This would appear to put Whistler halfway home.

And considering that Moscow has a bid in for the summer Olympics, and will have more than passing support, the B.C. group would like to cheerfully admit that at long last they may have a winner at the expense of Montreal.

That is, if Ahearne can be included in, along with a Canadian hockey team.

They would look nice together. In Amsterdam. In May.

Even Sinden 'Surprised' By Easy Going

CHICAGO (CP) — The Black Hawks tried everything — including moving Bobby Hull to centre—but they still go into Boston two games down in their best-of-seven Stanley Cup semi-final with the Bruins.

Boston toppled Chicago 4-1 Tuesday night, after outmuscling them 6-3 Sunday afternoon in the championship series of the National Hockey League East Division.

Bruins coach Harry Sinden was puzzled after the Tuesday night encounter.

"We hoped to get ahead of them and then slow it down," he said. "The Hull shift to centre was somewhat confusing. I have to say I am a little surprised that we have won the first two games here—not so much now as I would have been before the first game."

Boston got goals from Bobby Orr—the first he has scored against Chicago this year—Johnny McKenzie, Don Marcotte and Phil Esposito. Defenceman Bill White got the only goal for Chicago.

SAYS BETTER CLUB WON

"We were beaten by a better hockey club—they deserved to win," said Billy Reay, the Chicago coach.

"They've got a pretty good hockey player on that club. He could spell the difference between most hockey clubs."

Reay was talking about Orr, who has moved through the Chicago club this series almost at will.

Orr, the regular-season scoring champion, opened the scoring Tuesday at 5:08 of the first period. He went unmolested right up the slot, passed off late to Fred Stanfield and took a return pass in front of Tony Esposito, the Hawks' goalie.

It was his eighth goal of the playoffs. Doug Mohns and Ken Hodge were serving roughing penalties at the time.

SHOT DEFLECTED

Esposito, the Vezina Trophy winner, was screened on McKenzie's goal at 10:32 of the second period. McKenzie pulled loose from Stan Mikita to deflect a relay from Stanfield and Johnny Bucyk.

It was another defensive lapse by the Hawks at 13:09 which led to Marcotte's first playoff goal. Hodge took the puck away from rookie defenceman Keith Magnuson in the corner to the left of Esposito and centred it right onto Marcotte's stick.

Boston, which went ahead 1-0 in the first and came out of the second leading 3-0, let Chicago onto the scoreboard only once, at 2:18 of the third.

Gerry Pinder carried the puck down the left wing, passed to Jim Pappin and Pappin hit White with a pass that the big defenceman rifled behind Gerry Cheevers.

Seconds later, Magnuson and Wayne Carleton tangled and while they both got major penalties, Carleton won the fight.

PHIL STILL FLYING

The final goal of the game came from Phil Esposito, his 10th, which puts him within two of tying the single-season playoff record.

Dennis Hull lost the puck to the left of Tony Esposito in the corner. Tony's brother, Phil, dug it out and tucked it into the short side after drawing his brother to his knees.

"We've been bottling them up and not giving them a chance to get outside," Phil said.

"As long as we keep playing this way, there's not much they can do about anything—I hope. Obviously it was a big win for us."

Cheevers, who handled 32 shots compared to 23 by Esposito, said: "After Bill White's goal, I knew I had to bear down. We have had to concentrate on them more than the Rangers because they have better shooters."

Boston took six games to defeat New York Rangers in the east semi-final; Chicago disposed of Detroit Red Wings in four.

If Boston, with a reputation as an almost invincible home club, can take Chicago Thursday and Sunday, they can go into the Stanley Cup final against either St. Louis Blues or Pittsburgh Penguins.

If not, the series will come back here for one game, then alternate between Boston and Chicago.

Red's Move Backfires And Blues Take Charge

ST. LOUIS (CP)—Pittsburgh Penguins go home today to regroup and figure ways to suppress the explosive St. Louis offence which took its second victory Tuesday night in the Stanley Cup semi-finals.

The Blues swept past Penguin coach Red Kelly's starting lineup of one forward and four defencemen to score in the first minute and went on to a 4-1 victory. St. Louis won the first game of the best-of-seven series 3-1 Sunday night.

The series now switches to Pittsburgh for the third game Thursday night and the fourth Sunday.

Blues' coach Scotty Bowman said of Kelly's four-defenceman lineup:

"I figured he'd lose the game because of it, and he did.

"Toronto Maple Leafs used to try it about five games or so in a year and lose the same way. It's a try to get the other team out of rotation in its lines.

"I don't know what he was thinking, but I know we scored the first chance we got. Now the pressure's on them. They have to win two at home to have a chance."

Kelly said he was playing a hunch and hoped to replace two of the defencemen with forwards soon after play started, but the Blues didn't give him time for the switch.

12th Power Play Goal by St. Louis

Pittsburgh centre Bryan Hextall took a penalty about seven minutes later and the Blues' power play went to work for its 12th goal of the playoffs.

Goyette carried the puck into the Penguins' zone and fired a hard shot at Binkley from about 20 feet out. Winger Larry Keenan dashed across in front of the net and banged in the rebound.

About six minutes later, Keenan moved in on the right wing and pulled Binkley out of position, then slid a perfect pass to Goyette who put the puck in the open corner.

After a scoreless second period, the Penguins got one back when rookie centre Michel Briere pounced on a loose puck in front of Blues' goalie Jacques Plante and lifted it into the net.

But the Blues' close checking and a few outstanding saves by Plante kept the Penguins at bay, and St. Louis wrapped up the scoring with Frank St. Marseille's quick shot from a scramble in front of Binkley.

Throat Sore and Offence a Bit Sick

Kelly, nursing a sore throat he picked up during the first game Sunday, was critical of his team's lack of offence.

They took only five shots at Plante during the first period and a total of 24 in the game.

"I've never seen the puck go into the net yet if you don't shoot it," said Kelly. "All year long we were shooting the puck. Now all of a sudden we don't want to."

The Penguins had expected more brawling after Sunday night's first encounter, which produced 149 penalty minutes with four big fights. But the Blues gave the 16,857 fans a fine display of hockey, and only once in the third period tangled in a show of fists.

Defenceman Bob Plager of the Blues had just been called for charging when he started a scrap with Glen Sather. Nick Harbaruk of Pittsburgh got into the battle and both he and Sather joined Plager in the penalty box.

Left-winger Alb McDonald, who assisted on all three of the Blues first-period goals, tied a record for most assists in one playoff period, held by 12 other National Hockey League players.

McDonald has a total of eight assists and five goals, putting him among the playoff scoring leaders with 13 points.

A fifth game, if necessary will be played back in St. Louis, Tuesday, April 28.

Orr, Kelly Acclaimed By Puck Poll

MONTREAL (UPI) — Bobby Orr, star defenceman with Boston Bruins, has been named "player-of-the-year" by Hockey News.

That made it a clean sweep by Orr of the weekly's awards. He was picked earlier, in voting by fans, as most valuable player, and also was chosen a member of the all-star team.

William M. Jennings, president of the New York Rangers of the National Hockey League, was named executive of the year and Red Kelly of Pittsburgh Penguins was picked coach of the year.

Kelly, in his first year as coach of the Penguins, brought the club from two consecutive seasons of finishing fifth in the West Division to second place in 1969-70 and their first Stanley Cup playoff appearance.

Rollins Guides Jets Into Allan Cup Final

WINNIPEG (CP) — Al Rollins, coach and general manager of Spokane Jets, realized a goal Tuesday that he had set for himself when he took over the hockey team two years ago.

Rollins' Jets advanced to the Allan Cup final, against Orillia Terriers, by defeating St. Boniface Mohawks 5-3 to win the best-of-five western series 3-1.

"We played the kind of hockey we're capable of playing," Rollins said after the game.

Jets took a 2-1 lead after one period but added three unanswered goals in the second to lead 5-1 going into the final 20 minutes.

Mohawks pulled goaltender Henry Goy to ice an additional forward with 2:38 remaining in the third period, and although they swarmed all around the Spokane net, they managed only one goal, with eight seconds left.

The Jets got goals from Don Scherza, Jim Little, Bud Bodman, Ron Huston and Ken Gustafson.

The Mohawks goals were by Leo Duguay, Dave McGill and Wayne Bell.

Mohawks' goalie Goy faced 13 Spokane shots in the first period, compared to the six on Spokane netminder Dave Cox. Goy kicked out a total of 31 shots while Cox handled 27.

Aussies Sweep Davis Cup Series

TOKYO (AP) — Australia won two remaining singles matches Tuesday to sweep its Eastern Zone Section A Davies Cup finals against Japan 5-0.

Australia's Dick Crealy, however, had to battle for every point before defeating Japanese veteran Koji Watana by 9-11, 6-2, 6-1, 3-6, 6-3 in one of the matches.

Ray Ruffles defeated Japan's singles champion, Isao Kobayashi, 6-2, 6-2, 6-0 in the other.

Australia captured two opening singles Friday and a doubles match Sunday. A drizzle and rain-softened courts forced postponement of the two final singles, from Monday.

Gadsby Let Go By Red Wings

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit Red Wing officials said Tuesday night Bill Gadsby has been dismissed as chief scout of the National Hockey League team. Gadsby was told of his dismissal in a letter from club owner Bruce Norris. He was named chief scout after being relieved as head coach moments before the third game of the current season.

2-FOR-1 DEAL . . . . . . WITH BUCKS

Royals Trade 'Big O'

CINCINNATI (AP) — Super-star basketball player Oscar Robertson was traded to Milwaukee Bucks by Cincinnati Royals Tuesday for Flynn Robinson and Charley Paulk.

The trade puts Robertson on the same team with seven-foot-two Lew Alcindor which should give the Bucks one of the most prolific one-two scoring punches in the National Basketball Association.

The trading of Robertson was no surprise. Earlier, the Royals sought to trade him to Baltimore for Gus Johnson but Robertson invoked a clause in his contract which allowed him to approve a trade. He rejected going to Baltimore.

The six-foot-five Robertson is one of the highest paid players in the National Basketball Association. He is reported to have been receiving $125,000 a year here.

His scoring average has ranged from 24.7 and 1968-69 to 31.4 in 1963-64.

Chuckwagon A Galloper!

Not one, but two!

That's the number of engines which apply torque to the pavement in Chuck Poole's wheel-standing "Chuckwagon" from Sacramento, Calif., a feature attraction of the season-opener at Van Isle Dragways on Sunday.

Both 426 cubic inch Hemi engines are blown and injected, running on alcohol fuel.

They sit in tandem on the deck of a 1969 Dodge pickup, which they can move through the quarter mile in speeds approaching 140 miles per hour.

In addition to the appearance of Poole, Van-Isle has scheduled a full drag-racing program with stock, super-stock, street eliminator and competition eliminator categories.

Gates open at 9 a.m. with time trials starting at 10 and elimination commencing at 1:30 p.m.

ELSEWHERE AND OTHERWISE: Victoria pro Bill Wakeham and Point Grey's Dick Munn will face each other in the Vancouver City match-play tournament's semi-finals next Sunday . . . They made the appointment after a pair of dog-fights with quarter-final rivals . . . Wakeham, two down after five holes, charged back to defeat Gord MacKenzie 2 and 1 . . . Munn was four up after five holes, then lost six holes to find himself two down after 13 . . . Munn finally put down Ron Willey by scoring a birdie on the 18th . . . Another Victorian, John Morgan, bowed out on the 19th but created quite a stir by forcing the extra hole . . . Morgan bowed out when he underclubbed his approach shot on the extra hole and had to take a birdie . . . Doug Reid, Munn's assistant in the Point Grey pro shop, will face Kennedy in the other semi-final.

Quilchena brought over CPGA champion Bob Cox, but that wasn't quite enough as Glen Meadows rang up a convincing 45½-8½ victory over the Vancouver team in an inter-club battle Saturday . . . Host pro Dick Silverberg defeated Cox in their head-to-head meeting . . . In the planning stages, probably early next month, is a pro-am invitational tournament . . Cincinnati's Homer Binge Bombs Rivals

By The Associated Press

Cincinnati's rampaging Reds tagged Phil Niekro for four of their seven home runs Tuesday night and thumped the Atlanta Braves 13-8 to go 4½ games ahead of the pack in the National Baseball League West Division.

"If Cincinnati is this good," mused Braves Manager Luman Harris, "they can just go on to the World Series."

Only three weeks having gone by in the regular season, the Reds have a 13-4 season mark and 30 home runs, the last 10 of them in two victories at Atlanta.

The Braves, meanwhile, have dropped into the West Division cellar.

In Tuesday's other NL action, Pittsburgh outlasted Houston 9-8; the Chicago Cubs downed St. Louis 7-4 and San Diego tripped the New York Mets 5-3. Rain washed out the Los Angeles-Montreal and San Francisco-Philadelphia games.

PEREZ SWINGING

Tony Perez, the majors' hottest hitter, crashed his eighth homer and three singles to pace the Reds' 17-hit assault against Niekro, 0-4, and four Atlanta relievers. Rookie Bernie Carbo slammed two homers and Johnny Bench, Bob Tolan, Pete Rose and rookie Dave Concepcion hit one apiece.

Atlanta homers by Rico Carty, Orlando Cepeda and Felix Millan brought the two clubs within one of the single game National League record.

Niekro, the knuckleball artist who won 23 for the Braves last season, carries a 7.77 earned run average after four starts this spring and has been the victim of 11 homers in 24 1-3 innings.

Perez' (4-for-5) night boosted his batting average to .484, tops in both leagues. The Cincinnati third baseman also is setting the pace in home runs, RBI (22) and hits (30).

LYNN KNOCKS IN FIVE

Roberto Clemente's first homer of the year capped a five-run flurry in the sixth inning, sending the Pirates ahead 9-4, and they hung on to shade Houston. Jim Wynn delivered five runs for the Astros with a bases-loaded double and his fourth homer.

Billy Williams' three-run homer and Johnny Callison's two-run blast, both off Bob Gibson in the seventh inning, carried the Cubs past the Cardinals to their sixth straight victory. The homers were the first of the season off St. Louis pitching.

San Diego, beaten 11 straight times by the Mets, scored twice in the ninth to snap a 3-3 deadlock, Clarence Gaston knocking in the go-ahead run when center fielder Tommie Agee misjudged his liner and it fell for a double. Nate Colbert hit his sixth homer for the Padres.

Minor Rugby Squads Eye Provincial Titles

Two Vancouver Island rugby teams will be seeking to emulate senior brethren Sunday when they clash with Vancouver all-star teams.

With the Crimson Tide already in possession of the McKechnie Cup, emblematic of provincial senior English rugby supremacy, midgets and juniors will try to make it a clean sweep at Macdonald Park.

The midgets—17 and under—take the field at 1 p.m. with the junior game—19 and under—scheduled for 2:30 p.m. Both are all-star teams.

Organizer Ed Bryans says he's anticipating rugged action, particularly at the junior level.

"Vancouver has always had a powerful junior team and this year will be no exception," Bryans says. "But we have some tremendous talent to choose from, too, so the contest should be fairly even."

SPRING TOURNEY

Big Seniors Entry

Both front and back tees will be in use when the Vancouver Island Seniors' Golf Association stages its first tournament of the summer season on May 1 at Royal Colwood Golf and Country Club.

Some 150 golfers (including a contingent of 50 from the B.C. Mainland) representing approximately 20 clubs entered in the 21st annual spring tournament.

Fourth Car Sidelined From World Cup Rally

The only casualty was a Vauxhall Ventura with a British crew, which went off the road.

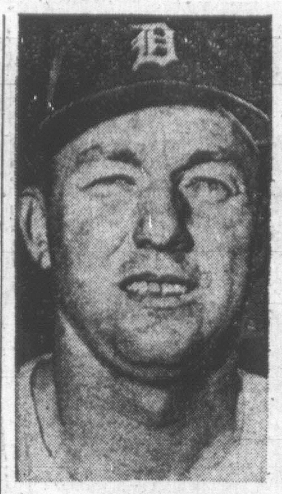

The crew, Cecil Woodley, Robert Locke, and Philip Waller escaped unhurt and managed to nurse their car back to the start of the special section at Titograd.

The weary drivers then began their toughest endurance test yet—a 120-mile beat-the-clock dash through winding lanes, rough forest tracks and semi-desert.

Tied for first with no penalties after the test were two Ford Escorts driven by Roger Clark of England and Jimmy Graves of England; a Porsche, Terry Hunter of England, another Ford Escort driven by Hannu Mikkola of Finland, and a Citroen DS21, G. Verrier, France.

Bomber List Grows

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg Blue Bombers of the Western Football Conference have signed their 24th and 25th players for the 1970 campaign. Latest to sign are Don Weiss, a holdover defensive back, and Larry Dolan, a Canadian quarterback who played at St. Francis Xavier University.

Kaline Delivers Punch

By The Associated Press

A slick pair of Tiger rookies supplied the batting punch but it was old professional Al Kaline who softened up and then delivered the knockout blow in Detroit's latest victory.

The East Division leading Tigers, rallied for two ninth-inning runs, nipping Cleveland Indians, 5-3, Tuesday night, to run their winning streak to six.

In other American League contests, Washington Senators stopped New York Yankees 7-5, Minnesota Twins topped Chicago White Sox 4-3, Oakland Athletics trimmed Kansas City Royals 4-3 and California Angels downed Milwaukee Brewers 3-1.

Kaline, the 35-year-old right fielder, in his 18th major league season, had kept the score even in the eighth inning, with a sensational, leaping catch at the fence, robbing Ted Uhlaender of a home run.

In the fourth inning, Maddox' first major league hit—a single—had tied the game, capping a three-run inning. Kaline triggered the rally with a single.

ERROR COSTLY

A two-out error by Yankees shortstop Gene Michael, followed by Bernie Allen's three-run homer, put the Senators in front to to stay at 5-3.

Casey Cox went 7 1-3 innings for his third triumph without a loss while New York ace Mel Stottlemyre, rapped for 11 hits in six innings, took his third defeat. Lee Maye stroked four hits for the Senators and scored four runs. Danny Cater drilled three hits for the Yankees.

Harmon Killebrew's three-run homer in the sixth inning provided the Twins with their winning margin. It was Killebrew's second of the season and 448th of his career. He also scored his 999th career run. White Sox starter Tommy John absorbed his fourth loss of the young season.

Don Mincher rapped a two-run homer in the eighth inning, giving the Athletics their victory after helping the Royals take a 3-2 edge earlier in the inning with a throwing error.

Tom Murphy, 2-1, with ninth-inning relief help, scattered three hits, striking out three and walking three and opened the decisive three-run third inning for the Angels with a single.

Dodgers' Singer On Ailing List

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Los Angeles Dodgers announced that right-hander Bill Singer may be suffering from hepatitis.

The ace pitcher was being flown home from Montreal, where he underwest preliminary tests, and that further tests will be conducted. Another Dodger pitcher, veteran Pete Mikkelsen, was sidelined recently by the same ailment.

Regals Claim National Title

POWELL RIVER (CP) — Powell River Regals won the Canadian intermediate hockey championship Tuesday night, defeating Val D'Or, Que., Olympics 5-3 in the deciding game of the best-of-five series.

About 2,270 fans jammed the arena in this community 70 miles north of Vancouver to watch captain Rob Carmen score twice for Regals.

Gatien Higgins, Dunc McDonald and Norm Furlong were the only Olympics to beat goaltender Ed Hyland, who stopped 20 shots.

The two teams were tied 1-1 at the end of the first period, but Regals opened up a 3-2 edge at the end of the second and won the series 3-2.

TWO MEN OFF

Furlong and Gilles St. Jacque were both off for Val D'Or when Carmen scored his second goal at 18:05 of the second period to give Powell River the lead for keeps.

Parenteau made it 4-2 at 1:17 of the third on a breakaway while Regals were a man short. Playing coach Bob Crawford was sitting out a hooking penalty assessed late in the second.

Ivan Temple, secretary-treasurer of the B.C. Amateur Hockey Association, presented the W. G. Hardy trophy, emblematic of intermediate hockey supremacy, to Carmen following the game.

It is only the third time that the trophy has been competed for and Quebec Amateur Hockey Association intermediate teams had won it on both previous occasions. Sept Isles took it in 1968 and La Tuque won it last season.

ARCTIC SOVEREIGNTY BID SAID ILLEGAL

BURLINGTON, Ont. (CP) — A British pollution specialist doubts that Canada will be able to enforce her sovereignty over waters within 100 miles of the Arctic coast line.

Ray Beynon, special adviser to British Petroleum Oil Co., told a meeting of the Canada Centre for Inland Waters Tuesday that Canada's claim to sovereignty in the Arctic is illegal, and it will lead to squabbles because other maritime nations will try the same move.

But Mr. Bynon, who helped clean up the oil spill from the Torrey Canyon on Britain's coast three years ago, said: "The government is rightfully concerned. If an oil tanker ever did spill its load in the Arctic it could be an overwhelming disaster because no one yet knows how to fight an oil spill in that climate."

He said the Arctic requires special protection measures, but these should be worked out on an international level.

BID TO REVEAL ENVIRONMENTAL ILLS

Earth Day Underlines Pollution

By The Associated Press

Earth Day is a cleaned pond, a buried auto, a college teach-in. It is thousands of Americans seeking to understand the ills of their environment and learn how they can be corrected. Earth Day is today.

The unprecedented event focuses attention in more than 2,000 communities across the United States on pollution problems, both local and national. In addition, many groups scheduled massive clean-ups.

At the same time, some corrporations and large businesses singled out for criticism by anti-pollution groups took advertisements and planned talks at various school and community groups to give their side of the story.

Many activities were designed to highlight one of four areas: water pollution, air pollution, the automobile and general litter.

Hundreds of motorists planned to forsake their automobiles for the day to protest pollution caused by the internal combustion engine. New York Mayor John V. Lindsay planned to ride to appointments in an electric car.

Traffic bans were scheduled in parts of many cities including New York and Philadelphia.

WOMEN PICKET

Water pollution was the concern of a group of women from Canada and the United States who joined forces Tuesday to picked on Zug Island in the Detroit River. They protested alleged pollution by the Great Lakes Steel Corp.

Reynolds Metals Co. said it would send trucks to 18 colleges in 14 states to pick up aluminum cans collected during "trash-ins." They will pay for the cans.

A number of corporations took newspaper advertisements today to tell what measures they were taking to deal with pollution problems.

Dead ducks, suffocated by oil slicks, will be dumped in front of the interior department offices in Washington.

A symbolic funeral will be staged at Boston's Logan Airport to protest supersonic transport.

Earth Day grew from a suggestion by senator Gaylord Nelson, Dem. Wis., who proposed a nationwide "teach-in" on environmental problems after observing the support mobilized for the anti-war campaign last November.

At a news conference Tuesday, its national co-ordinator, Denis Hayes, said the group, Environmental Teach-In, Inc., will reconstitute itself as Environmental Action. Hayes said the organization plans to become a political action group.

Deal-Makers Seen Taking Over Movies

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Two events at this year's Academy Awards held special significance about the new state of the film industry:

When Midnight Cowboy was proclaimed the best picture of the year, the award was claimed by its producer, Jerome Helman.

When Gig Young won the Oscar for best supporting actor because of They Shoot Horses, Don't They? he saved his most lavish thanks for the head of the producing company, Martin Baum.

Both Helman and Baum are one-time agents.

A few years ago, a local sage made the remark: "Blessed are the deal makers, for they shall inherit the film industry." His prediction appears to be coming true, at least in part. A glance over the production ranks shows that former agents are assuming ever-increasing power in movie production.

The head of the new Warner Brothers management team is Ted Ashley, who once ran one of the biggest talent agencies in show business. Since 1962, Universal has been run by Music Corporation of America, which used to be called "the octopus" because of its control of film talent.

By government decree, MCA went out of the agency business after the studio purchase.

DESPISED AGENTS

Martin Baum, agent for Gig Young and other stars, now heads the movie enterprises of ABC. Herb Solow, vice-president in charge of production at MGM, once worked for the William Morris Agency. That's a bit of irony because his predecessor, Louis B. Mayer, had nothing but disdain for agents and barred them from the lot.

Indeed, the agent once occupied the lowliest position in the Hollywood hierarchy. He was considered a necessary evil, a sharpie who hustled jobs for his clients and collected his 10 per cent commission in money or blood.

That concept began to change in the 1930s with the advent of Myron Selznick. Embittered because he believed the film bosses had bankrupted his father, Lewis J. Selznick, Myron sought revenge by demanding outrageous terms for stars and directors. He attracted a huge talent list to his agency because of his effectiveness.

MCA had even greater success in the years following the Second World War. The giant agency was able to set up picture deals in which the producer, director, writer and stars were all MCS clients. It was a natural step to assume control of Universal.

Says one longtime observer: "The old-line studio bosses—Mayer, Cohn, Warner, etc.—didn't provide successors. Like all tyrants, they didn't want any threats to their power. So when the big studio system started decaying and the pioneers began losing control and dying off, there was no one to fill in.

"Agents quite naturally filled the vacuum. They were ideally suited, because they knew how to put a deal together. That's what being a producer means nowadays: being able to assemble the talent and money for a picture. There are damn few creative producers of the Sam Goldwyn or David Selznick variety."

Some agents have become producers by going into partnership with their clients. That was true of Harold Hecht, who was long associated with Burt Lancaster. In the case of the late Martin Melcher, the client was also his wife, Doris Day.

Other agents have ascended to producership by putting together packages and selling them along with themselves. Among the most successful was Lawrence Turman, who produced The Graduate.

Students to Make Trip

OTTAWA (CP) — Ottawa University's newest class should appeal to anybody who speaks a little Spanish, has an interest in Latin America and likes mountains and travel.

The class is called the Andean summer field program and it will take students on a 52-day round trip of 8,000 miles to the Peruvian Andes.

It is organized jointly by the departments of geography and modern languages and will feature field observations and lectures on geography and Hispanic-American culture.

It is open to only 13 students and Dr. Rolf Wesche, assistant professor of geography who is a project organizer, says the trip to Colombia, Ecuador, Bolivia and Peru will involve "considerable physical effort and some discomfort."

Wanted: A New Definition Of the Word 'Progress'

By ED GOULD

SHAWNIGAN LAKE — The broad environment must be considered—stratosphere, biosphere, atmosphere, the oceans of the earth—before you can come down to Canadian and British Columbia problems of pollution, an author-conservationist said Tuesday.

Roderick Haig-Brown told about 250 students at Shawnigan Lake Boys' School that local problems, while important, "were almost trivial compared with the wide level of environmental pollution."

He said North Americans had overwhelmed their continent with population and industry in a very short time.

"We have skimmed its Expansive policies fostered resources, now we are going to have to get along with it," by economies that deliberately encourage waste and bow to the "gods of growth and efficiency" have allowed this to happen, he said.

"In the past we have allowed a conspiracy between big business and the governments to pass in the name of progress but a new definition of the word progress is needed."

Among the more dangerous aspects of land and water pollution he included the herbicides 2,4,5-T and 2,4-D—"very drastic poisons on humans and animals"—over 10 times the threat of thalidomide.

"We are rediscovering mercury. After quietly dumping it into our watercourses it is now coming back to us. Oil spills, deliberate for many years, now accidental, are quietly collecting in the seas. Oil is non-biodegradable, contrary to what we originally believed."

HAIG-BROWN
. . . halt the conspiracy

In the world of air pollution, the noted author feared the increasing number of supersonic transport planes.

"To avoid their sonic booms over land we directed them across the oceans with no thought given to their effect on ocean life and the stratosphere."

Because of them a pollution belt is building up around the earth and no serious examination of the effects on climate is being done anywhere.

McHAFFEY
. . . 'never sure'

"We are spending billions on faster-than-sound travel which will cause us a lot of trouble, perhaps will end our species." He told the students they had "better start asking a lot of questions."

Haig-Brown was not entirely pessimistic. He found hopeful signs in Prime Minister Trudeau's "world leadership" on Arctic pollution.

"We are not being territorial, we are simply saying we will not tolerate pollution up there. The United States is against our stand and now we are in an international debate because we are answering them."

The U.S. was on thin ground in telling Canada it was interfering in international affairs, "the U.S. is interfering in areas all over the world."

A second speaker, Bill McHaffey of MacMillan Bloedel, said people working in industry did not want to leave a polluted world anymore than anyone else.

"A company is made up of individuals—it is not one big heartless corporation."

He said it is relatively difficult to determine which chemicals to be discharged in the air and water as wastes would be absorbed by nature. Major by-products of the pulp and paper industry were limerock, sulphur, sodium chloride and various phosphates which broke down.

It was the man-made chemicals which had to be accounted for later in pollution, because nature had no way of handling them.

McHaffey said the industry spent millions of dollars often in a fruitless search for a solution to a pollution problem.

"We are never sure we are doing a good job. Opinions, not facts, are sometimes all we have to work with."

He said solution to one problem sometimes led to another problem even more difficult to solve. More basic research is needed into specific problems, he said.

"Although we are in the forefront of technology, some of the best equipment doesn't even work."

SMITH

Trumpeter Swans May Number 600

The wintering population of trumpeter swans on Vancouver Island might be as high as 600.

This is the conclusion of the fish and wildlife branch, B.C. Recreation Department, from a survey taken during the winter months of 1969 and 1970.

Regional biologist Ian Smith counted 402 swans on Vancouver Island and 120 on the mainland. Most of the survey was made from aircraft, but some information was obtained from ground counts.

"Because of the daily movements and early migration of the swans," Smith said, "and disruptions to the survey caused by bad weather, the actual count represents the minimum number of swans wintering in the area.

"A comparison with earlier surveys suggests 600 swans might winter on the Island."

Smith said between 60 and 80 per cent of trumpeter swans were found to occur at estuaries. The remainder were seen on inland bodies of fresh water.

Similar information was not available for mainland areas and population estimates were not made.

Pearkes to Attend St. George Dinner

Major-General George Pearkes, former lieutenant-governor of British Columbia, will be guest of honor at a Saint George's Day dinner in Nanaimo Thursday at 7 p.m.

The dinner is being held under auspices of the newly-former Nanaimo branch of the Royal Society of Saint George.

Founder of the branch is Major Fred Ney, uncle of Mayor Frank Ney, and leader of the Commonwealth Youth Movement, which arranges quests every year to Commonwealth countries.

Victoria branch of the Royal Society of Saint George was disbanded in 1965 because of dwindling membership.

"We tried to revive the branch in Victoria," said Major Ney, "but were unsuccessful. I am thankful we had better luck in Nanaimo.

"Saint George is the patron saint, no only of England, but of Poland, Islam and other countries. I believe his memory should be perpetuated.

"We would welcome other guests from Victoria."

Roast beef will be served at the dinner, to be held in the Shoreline Hotel, and a dance will follow.

Dali Work Missing

WHEAT LOSSES HIT INDUSTRY

TORONTO (CP) — The drop in Canadian wheat sales has hit hard at the agriculture equipment manufacturing industry in Ontario, Stanley Randall trade and development minister, said Tuesday.

Mr. Randall told the legislature the government may have to take some action if the slump in the Ontario industry becomes prolonged.

He did not elaborate on what kind of action Ontario could take.

"But we do have a stake in the sale of wheat," he said.

SPEC, Farmer Protest Spray Program

WESTHOLM — Municipal employees and a young entomologist hired by North Cowichan municipality to distribute a mosquito killer were accused Tuesday of using doses 500 times that recommended by the manufacturer.

David Kearns of Simon Fraser University, hired to direct the municpal mosquito control program, said he had recommended use of Abate 5C but had been away when it was being applied.

One capsule of Abate 5C is recommended according to instructions on the containers in every 1,000 square feet of mosquito-infested water, with one capsule for each additional 1,000 square feet.

Farmer Bill Bonsall said the capsules were dropped in an intensity 500 times as strong as allowed in the instructions.

Kurt Horn, president of Cowichan-Malahat SPEC, said unlicenced persons were carrying out the operation.

Another farmer, Henry Bonsall, said the municipal employees had dropped five capsules of the chemical on his land in an area much smaller than allowable and that the solution would kill his cattle if they drank it.

Municipal engineer John Sansom said the employees had applied the first capsules on Thursday and one of the farmers had been present. Mosquito larvae had been destroyed but other insects had not been harmed, he said.

He said other Westholme landowners had given their permission to use Abate 5C on their land and "I am prepared to take some criticism from SPEC if it means relief from the mosquito plague we suffered last year."

The Bonsall farms, adjacent to Crofton Pulp and Paper Limited, were pinpointed last fall as being the major local source of the saltmarsh variety mosquito.

Kearns, a member of SPEC himself, stressed that the chemical had already been used to control mosquito breeding in other swampy areas and unlike DDT, Abate 5C would break down in a relatively short time.

He said a permanent solution to the problem would be to drain the area but that would be extremely costly.

Art Show On Until Saturday

DUNCAN — The first Malaspina College spring art show on display at Eaton's department store will continue until Saturday.

Gael Tower, art director at Malaspina, said it is hoped the show will become an annual event.

Eleven artists who live in this area have their work in the exhibit. Second prize was won by Stephen Horn of Duncan.

After Saturday the exhibition will move to a number of other Vancouver Island communities. The paintings are not for sale during the exhibition, Tower said, but arrangements for purchase can be made through the college after the showings are completed.

U.S. GOVERNMENT SPARKS INITIATIVE

Suspicious Foods Recalled by Makers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. government has initiated the voluntary removal from the market of 13,900,000 servings of a well-known soup mix because of the danger of food poisoning.

Also since January, it has spurred industry recalls of 334,000 pounds of popcorn packed by a Milford, Ill., firm; of 24,000 nationally-distributed frozen strawberry pies manufactured by a Columbus, Ohio, baker; and of 2,000 cases of a name-brand candy. All were contaminated with insect or rodent material, or both.

Other food items recalled in the past three months because of contamination include dried eggs, anchovies, noodles, raisins, frozen fried chicken, peanut butter, pimentos, pizzas and mushrooms.

COVER 40 PER CENT

The recalls never are totally successful, says a spokesman for the U.S. Food and Drug Administration. Some of the products are purchased and consumed. The agency can't say how many.

The National Academy of Sciences says FDA inspects only 40 per cent of the 64,000 interstate food-processing plants subject to federal checking, and the agency itself estimates that 20 per cent of the plants are in substantial violation of government standards.

The most spectacular recall this year has been the 13,900,000 servings of these nationally distributed, cartoned, Lipton soups: Perky Noodle Soup Mix, Chicken Vegetable Soup Mix, Ring-O-Noodle Soup Mix With Real Chicken Broth, Giggle Noodle Soup With Real Chicken Broth—test marketed in New England only—and Beef Flavor Noodle Soup With Vegetables.

All the soups were contaminated with a bacteria called salmonella that can cause food poisoning.

Lipton is recalling the mixes from retail shelves, but the FDA estimated that between 15 and 20 per cent remained on the market as of last week.

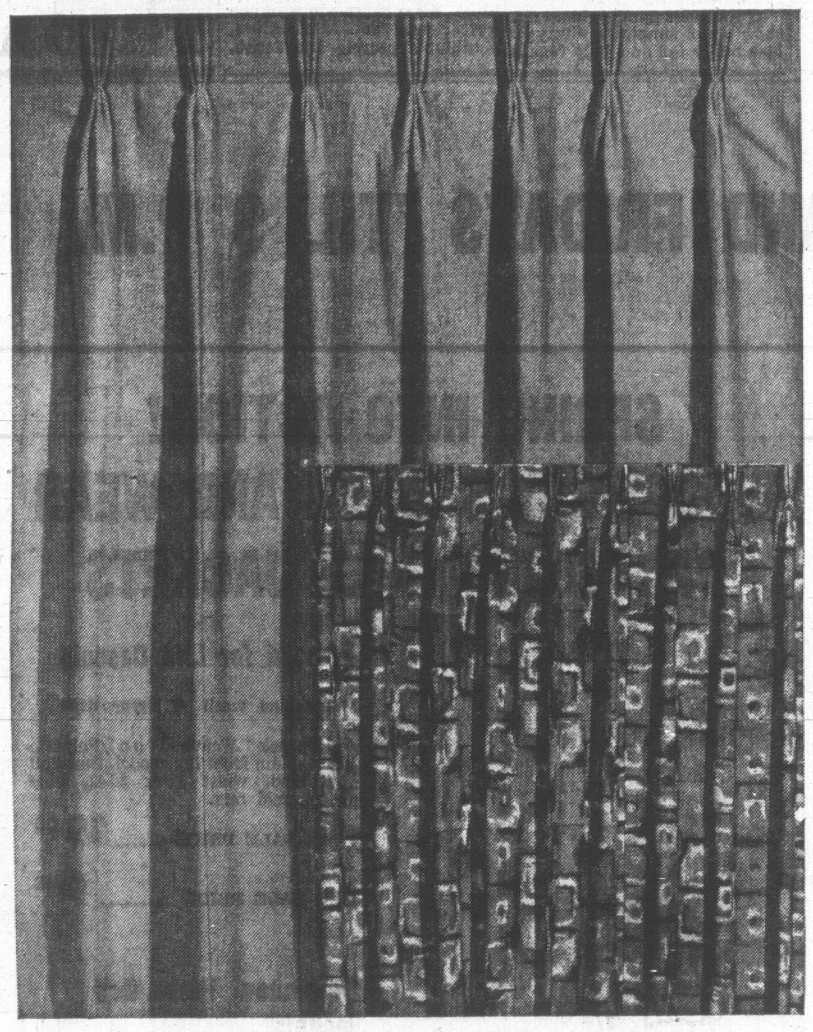

Tuesday night the FDA warned against eating a brand of prepared pizzas distributed by the Roman Inn Pizza Co., throughout the upper U.S. Midwest.

The FDA said mushrooms in some of the 80,000 "Roman Deluxe Italian Brand" pizzas produced this month are suspected of causing botulism, an acute food poisoning that can be fatal.

THRILLING PERFORMANCES BY PAIR

Festival Peak Reached by Under-19s

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Each day in the 1970 Victoria Music Festival has had its peak moment.

Some have had a whole mountain range of peaks such as last Wednesday in the strings section.

Tuesday, eighth day of the 12-day event, was another rewarding one for the festival-goer.

In piano sessions at St. John's Hall, for instance, throughout the day there were performances that would delight the most musically fastidious listener.

These culminated in the evening with an under-19 concert group class of an overall exceptional standard that provided two thrilling performances.

Adjudicator Sidney Harrison gave unequivocal praise to Jocelyn Abbott for her playing of Bach, Beethoven and Debussy. For this most musically accomplished performance she garnered a total of 270 marks which included a 90 and a 91.

Harrison was also deeply impressed with the work of Wendy Stofer, whose program was chosen from Mozart, Chopin and Bartok. Her total of 267 marks also included a 90.

Tuesday was the day for Bach classes and Harrison repeatedly urged the young performers not to take such a solemn and serious view of the composer.

"Have fun with him — enjoy him — it's not a sacrilege like laughing in church. He wrote beautiful music that should be a pleasure to players and listeners."

The adjudicator also had something to say to parents. After telling some of the players they should listen to records of music by Mozart, Schubert and others, he said: "If you send your child to have music lessons and you don't provide him with a musical background at home you are delinquent parents."

The day was climaxed for singers in an evening session at First United Fellowship Hall.

An operatic class for female voices was described by adjudicator Rankin Bushby as "the best operatic class I have heard across Canada."

Of nine entrants, Evelyn Westinghouse, singing Una voce poca fa from The Barber of Seville, and Adele Lewis singing Ritorno vincitor from Aida, promped a 92 and 91 from conservatively marking Bushby.

Paying her first official visit to Victoria, Leona F. Paterson is adjudicating the speech arts and proving to be not only one of the most capable ever to have taken on the task, but certainly the most tactful, considerate and charming.

Chairman of the speech and drama department of Mount Royal College in Calgary, Mrs. Paterson is constructively analytical of technical and interpretive aspects, friendly but concise, a conservative marker.

She was delighted Tuesday afternoon, with classes for Canadian poetry and dramatic monolgoue in the under 16 age bracket.

She felt most of the work to be of a fine standard and praised the students' choices which ranged from Lampman and James Reaney in the Canadian poetry to Shaw, Wilde and Shakespeare in the monologues.

Speech arts continue at St. Ann's Academy auditorium tonight and Thursday and Friday, concluding Friday night with an honor performance and bursary competition for winners.

Brass and woodwind sessions concluded today with duet and school ensemble classes all afternoon.

Highlight of tonight's piano session is the class postponed from Tuesday evening, the concert group, open. Preceding it there will be an open Beethoven sonata class and an open Debussy class which, regrettably, has only one entry.

There will also be a senior concert group class for singers, across the street at Fellowship Hall. Also male operatic, musical comedy solo and senior contralto and bass classes.

On Thursday the festival builds toward its climax — the Highlights concert at McPherson Playhouse Saturday night — with the special Beethoven centenary classes and Rose Bowl and Medallion vocal and piano finalist competitions.

These events are grouped in a "don't miss" program Thursday evening at Fellowship Hall.

Reserved seat tickets are on sale now for Saturday at the McPherson box office. The program will include some of the impressive string performances from last week as well as major scholarship and prize winners in other intrumental, vocal and speech categories.

Creditiste Leader Impresses Backers With Rousing Talk

By JACQUES BOUCHARD

When he speaks at a meeting nobody sleeps. He can bring his audience to a fever pitch, arousing long ovations.

The six-foot Mr. Samson often has only two meals a day—a light lunch and a suitable supper in the evening. He frustrates his advisers who want him to eat three square meals a day.

At 35, Mr. Samson is the youngest of the main party leaders contesting the April 29 Quebec general election. The other parties are the governing Union Nationale, Liberals, Parti Quebecois and New Democratic Party.

He is married to Gisele Tardif and they have three children, Louise, 13, Daniel, 9, and Mario, 3. Because of family demands, Mrs. Samson has not continually travelled with her husband during the current campaign.

HIRED BY COMPETITOR

Mr. Samson loves the outdoors. But he gave up his first job as a wood measurer because he also loves meeting people and wanted to become more active in society.

So he started selling insurance and then cars. He was hired as a car salesman in Rouyn, Que., by a competitor of his political idol, Real Caouette.

Mr. Samson had joined the Social Credit movement in 1957, and a year later stayed with Mr. Caouette when the latter founded the federal Ralliement des Creditistes.

In 1963 and 1965 Mr. Samson was a Creditiste candidate in two federal elections, losing both times. In 1966 he campaigned in the Quebec provincial election as a candidate for the separatist Ralliement National in Temiscamingue riding. He was also defeated in that vote.

Mr. Samson says he is not a separatist. But he found in Ralliement National, now disbanded, an economic doctrine closely akin to Mr. Caouette's.

HAD POOR CHILDHOOD

CN Official Says Ferry Sank Quickly Following Swamping

SYDNEY, N.S. (CP) — The Canadian National ferry Patrick Morris sank in less than 30 minutes after the sea pounded in the stern doors, Capt. Murdoc Fudge, Newfoundland area marine supervisor for CN, said Tuesday.

He said after the doors were broken down, the vessel filled with water and sank off North Sydney Monday.

Earlier, it had been believed that the stern doors, used to load railway cars aboard the ferry, had been opened to pick up bodies of seamen from the sunken herring seiner Enterprise.

The 47 survivors of the ferry sinking arrived here by chartered plane Tuesday after a flight from Port Cartier, Que., where they had been taken by a rescue ship.

Some were to leave for their Newfoundland homes today aboard the ferry William Carson and others were to follow later after talking to transport department officials, conducting a preliminary inquiry into the sinking.

The seamen were questioned Tuesday night for more than two hours and were ordered not to discuss the sinking with reporters.

END CAME QUICKLY

Capt. Fudge said water quickly filled the vessel's train deck and the engine room.

"The vessel immediately developed a 40-degree list and sank in less than 30 minutes."

Capt. Roland Penney, 54, of Lewisporte, Nfld., and three engineering officers were lost in the sinking.

The bodies of the three engineers were still missing Tuesday. They were identified as chief engineer David Reekie, 53, of Montreal; second engineer Joseph Henry Slayman, 48, of St. John's, Nfld., and third engineer Ronald A. Anderson, 44, of North Sydney, N.S.

CN's Atlantic region vice-president, J. W. G. MacDougall said CN will consider salvaging the Morris, in about 300 feet of water about 12 miles off the coast.

"We will try to send a diver down to examine the ship soon. If we could salvage her for something like $5,000,000, then it would be a good investment."

Replacement value of the Morris is $10,000,000.

Recipe of the Week

Upside Down Apple Tart

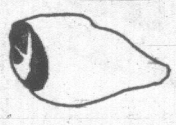

10 medium sized cooking apples
1 cup sugar
6 tbles. Fraser Valley Butter
1 tsp. Spice Islands Cinnamon
¼ tsp. salt
1 cup Dairyland whipping cream

Peel, core and slice apples in eighths. Using a large frying pan, heat the 6 tbles. butter, sugar and cinnamon; add apple slices and cook for 7 to 10 minutes; turning the apples frequently so they have a glaze and just start to lose their crispness. Let cool slightly, then arrange in a round, 10-inch diameter, 2-inch deep pan with straight sides. Make a pinwheel design on the bottom and layer fruit evenly on the top. For the pastry crust roll out into an 11-inch diameter circle. Place pastry over apples in pan, pinch edges to pan sides and make slits in the centre. Bake in a 450 degree oven for 10 minutes, reduce temperature to 400 degrees and bake 10 to 15 minutes longer or until apples are tender. Let cool to room temperature. Then slip a knife around the edge and invert onto a serving platter. Accompany with whipped cream. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

American Foods Make French Chef Shudder

By ISRAEL SHENKER

NEW YORK — The Guide Michelin, supreme arbiter of French eating, describes a two-star meal as "worth a detour" and a three-star meal — the supreme level — as "well worth the journey."

Usually the client makes the journey. But this time the meal made the trip — all the way from Roanne, France, to East 57th Street in New York.

It was cooked and served by Jean Troisgros, who arrived recently for his first visit to America. At home in Roanne, he and his brother Pierre are the chefs at Troisgros, one of only 12 restaurants in France with three Michelin stars.

Troisgros had been invited to cook a meal at the Four Seasons for 25 gourmets, and he brought with him for this meal foie gras, pate de grives (pate of thrush), crayfish tails, sorrel and snails. He wishes he had brought blood as well.

"I never dreamed you couldn't buy blood here," he said, thinking ahead to the duck he was going to cook at the Four Seasons. "When we kill ducks in France, we twist their necks, so that the blood stays in the animal. Here, you slit the throats, and the blood runs out."

Eager to see how Americans eat, he took his wife, Maria, to a Horn and Hardart's for their first pancakes. He doggedly ate half his portion.

To see what foods were available to the American housewife, the Troisgroses went into a supermarket. Gingerly Troisgros lifted a bottle of "French dressing" from the shelf. He shuddered as he read the list of chemical ingredients.

"They really complicate things in order to eat here," he decided.

He wondered how difficult it would be to cook this American food. Instead of accepting a dinner invitation, he suggested cooking a meal himself. After a moment of stunned silence, he was invited to this reporter's home — and promptly began helping himself to ingredients from the supermarket shelves, making out the labels despite the fact that they were written in English.

He began preparing the meal by slicing string beans lengthwise, but never along the seam. "There are no threads on the beans," his wife noted approvingly.

How can anybody expect to cook vegetables here?" Troisgros asked. "When you turn on the faucet all you get is the smell of chlorine."

He nonetheless put the beans, a handful at a time, into a large pot of chlorinated boiling water — and kept adding salt (he quickly discovered that the table salt was barely salty). "All green vegetables should be put into boiling water — with no lid," he said. "All dry vegetables should be put into cold water — with a lid."

The asparagus won his heart. "They're lovely," he said. Much better than what you find in France."

As dressing for the asparagus, he mixed French mustard, Italian olive oil, American vinegar, and added salt and pepper and tiny bits of stone-leeks.

When the asparagus had been carefully re-heated, served, and exclaimed over, the chef returned to the kitchen, and began tailoring the lamb chops, cutting off the end of each bone, and removing most of the fat. "If the knives are good, the cook is good," he said.

He heated the frying pan, threw several unpeeled pieces of garlic into the pan, and added butter. "You must never put butter into a cold pan," he said, "because it will stick to the pan."

"You must never turn meat more than once," he cautioned, as he added more salt. "It's better to eat white beans that have been properly salted," he said, "than the best steak unsalted."

"The pan must never be bigger than the meat," he said, basting the chops. "If it's bigger, the butter burns."

Eating his chop, he cut only a slice at a time, explaining: "If you cut all the meat in advance, the blood is in the plate, and it doesn't look good, and it doesn't taste good."

Surveyors Invade Canadian Kitchens

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP) — Medical gear poised, teams for a national nutrition survey are massing to advance on community X.

They are the shock troops to test the methods to be used this fall when 21,000 Canadians across the land will be surveyed to determine whether they are feeding themselves properly.

The preliminary run is taking place in great secrecy. Even the name of the test community is under wraps. But some facts have been made known.

Using specially-trained teams of two medical examiners, a dental examiner, six interviewers, two medical technicians, four clerks and other support staff, the survey will spend an estimated $1,730,000 of public funds—$86 per person surveyed—to learn the state of health and nutrition patterns of Canadians.

Initially the team conducts a 15-minute home interview with the household selected for survey, gathering some data but making a date for a visit by the family one week later to a clinic where blood, urine and body measurements are to be taken.

Clinics will be located mostly at nearby schools.

WILL PASS ON DATA

As the survey progresses, provincial health departments will be provided with the information.

Stated objectives of the survey are to estimate the prevalance of nutritional diseases and disorders and to identify the types of foods and estimate the quantity normally consumed.

This will determine levels of nutritients, food additives, non-nutritive substances and even pesticide residues in daily diet.

Twenty thousand individuals plus another 1,000 pregnant women will have been surveyed at two seasons of the year by the time the survey ends towards the end of 1972. The evaluation is scheduled for 1972-73.

AGE GROUPS

Equal numbers will be studied in each of five regions—Atlantic, Quebec, Ontario, Prairies, British Columbia.

Broken down by ages, the survey group includes 1,000 boys and girls aged up to five years, 1,000 boys and girls aged five to 10; 1,000 boys and men and 1,000 girls and women aged 11 to 20; 1,000 men and 1,000 women aged 21 to 40; 1,000 men, 1,000 women aged 41 to 65; and 1,000 men and 1,000 women aged 66 and over.

In recent years, various smaller surveys have turned up indications that substantial numbers, sometimes up to 40 per cent, exist on a poor or extremely poor diet, and there is a high level of malnutrition and vitamin deficiency.

Folds Widen Cap of Sleeve

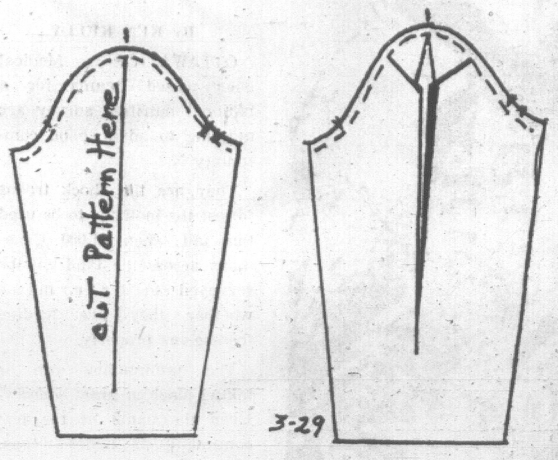

Dear Eunice Farmer,

I make most of my clothes and the only obvious problem is sleeves. No matter how much I add to the underarm seam, I still get a draw across the upper arm which results in limited movement of my arms. Many women that I have talked to have the same problem; perhaps you could help all of us.—Mrs. W.S.

Dear Mrs. W.S.:

Adding extra width to the underarm of a garment will not affect the cap of the sleeve. Since many patterns today are cut with extremely close fitting sleeves, it would be a good idea to keep a sleeve pattern that fits you in some handy place and check the sleeve sizing before cutting something new. Be sure to remember that if you use the sleeve from another pattern, you must also cut the armhole from the same pattern.

To add to the width of the cap of the sleeve, slit the sleeve from the seam allowance at the shoulder to somewhere below the elbow, at the centre of your pattern. Take a small (about ¼ to ⅜-inch) diagonal fold about 3 inches below the cap of the sleeve, beginning at the slit and ending with nothing as the seamline. The two folds, one on each side of the slit in your pattern, will actually shorten the cap of your sleeve, not changing the outside area of the sleeve cap. It will give you the extra width that should prevent drawing across the upper arm. If you need this alteration, it is best to make a sample sleeve out of scrap fabric and actually pin it into your armhole to be sure it fits properly.

SLEEVES NEED EXTRA WIDTH

Dear Eunice Farmer,

With pleated fabric used so much in expensive ready-to-wear, how can we gals who try to copy these beautiful things find the pleated fabrics?—Mrs. H.R.S.

Dear Mrs. H.R.S.:

There are some types of fabric that can be purchased already pleated and others you will have to have pleated for you. Almost any kind of fabric can be permanently pleated professionally, but this type of service is usually only found in large cities.

You can find pleating companies listed in the phone book, if they are located too far away, write to them and find out whether you should hem the fabric first (this will depend on the fabric and the type of pleating you wish), how much you should allow in width, and the cost per yard. Then if you decide to go ahead with it, I know you will be pleased with the results. Unfortunately, the cost is based on the time it takes to set the machinery up, once this is done, it is a simple operation.

Better Nutcracker Defies Description

By PENNY SAVER

"As a bottle lid wrench it's a failure," I told my husband. "Look at those wicked unprotected metal edges! Quite apart from slipping and sliding, they would crunkle the metal and jam the threads."

"It isn't a lid wrench. Guess again."

"A universal bolt un-doer?"

He shook his head.

"Then I give up."

"A nutcracker," he said with a grin.

Of course, once he explained that, it all became clear.

This unusual device is new in Victoria, though I understand it has been on the British market for 16 years.

It really is the better nutcracker since it will crack the shell without shattering the meat. It is also impossible to squeeze a finger accidentally.

But what does it look like?

All I can say is, a little like a pair of garden clippers and a little like a jar wrench. It has clipper handles attached to an oval of metal. Inside the oval is a T-shaped bar with ratchets down one side of the upright and a depression on the top.

That depression is matched by another at the top of the frame. The nut is placed between these just tightly enough so it stays put without you holding it.

Then you squeeze on the handle, slowly crushing the nut.

By stopping just as the shell shatters, you save the meat.

This gadget is also great for crab and lobster claws because you have total control.

It crushes cubes of ice, too, without nasty, dangerous ice picks that can jab.

As my original description indicated, this nutcracker is very sturdily made. In fact, I find it hard to believe it could break.

There is, however, a three-year manufacturers's guarantee included in each box along with complete operating instructions.

There are several finishes available for this nutcracker but the one most readily obtainable is chrome as it has proved most popular in the past.

Other finishes are stove enamel in gold, grey, blue-grey, metalic pink and metalic green. These have to be ordered specially, and would take some time to arrive.

I have saved the price to the last because it is the only possible drawback—$4.95.

This is a bit lower than in the U.S. but still high enough to make it nicer to receive as a gift than buy for yourself.

Still, it is so versatile, easy-to-use and sturdy that I feel it would be worth the price. It is decidedly on the "gifts for someone" side of my perpetual list.

If you would like to know where this nutcracker can be seen and bought, please call 382-3131 between 9 a.m. and 12 noon.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Explosive Move

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Both my wives read your column.

I have just been offered a promotion to a top job in our Honolulu office. Policy dictates that either I take the job or resign.

For 25 years I have been in charge of our two offices, one in Fort Worth and the other in Houston, alternating weekly.

I have a wife in each town, support two families, and put two sets of children through school.

If I were to resign, it would hurt everybody. I cannot, and will not, decide between either of my wives. I want to take both of them. What should I do? Please hurry, Abby. I haven't much time. — Troubled in Texas.

DEAR TROUBLED: Keep one family in Hilo and the other in Oahu. And buy all the volcano insurance you can get.

DEAR ABBY: Will you help us get the message across to our 15-year-old daughter that it looks bad for young people to put on a show of affection in public? I want to crawl in a hole when I see my daughter walking down the street with her boy-friend. She is hanging on him, or their arms are around each other's waists, and they even stop to kiss right on the street!

When they are in the car together, she is practically sitting on his lap. And when they are indoors, it's the same picture.

Abby, I know young people are attracted to each other, and I am not saying there is anything wrong with honest emotions, but please tell young people to keep their hands off each other in public! — Old Fashioned.

DEAR OLD FASHIONED: Hello, young lovers (wherever you are) and this goes for the older lovers, too.

All the world may love a lover, but it's poor taste to act out the role in public. A boy who respects a girl will keep his hands off her in public, and a girl who respects herself, will make sure he does.

DEAR ABBY: I am 69 years of age, a Buddhist missionary and a private teacher of English, German and the violin here in Bangkok. I came here from Germany 38 years ago, and during that time I have had no chance to satisfy my refined and spiritual love hunger — the reason being that I am two-thirds bald.

The Thai women do not like bald-headed lovers, and the western women find other excuses. German women never demanded hair on their men. Can you help me while there is still time! — Bald-Headed In Bangkok.

DEAR BALD-HEADED: Either get yourself a hair piece, or head for Germany and find a woman there who will satisfy your refined and spiritual hunger — while there is still time.

CONFIDENTIAL TO ARIES AND CAPRICORN: Thank your lucky stars! It's better to have loved and lost than to have hated and won.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Possession of Stolen Goods Brings Jail Term

A 51-year-old man with a criminal record of theft and related offences stretching back to 1940 was sentenced to 10 months in prison Tuesday for possession of stolen property.

Hugh C. Smith, 724 Yates, pleased guilty to the offence when he appeared before Judge William Ostler earlier.

He was found to be in possession of two cameo necklaces when searched by police April 17 as well as to have given away a ring to another person.

The jewelry was part of a $840 theft of costume jewelry taken from the T. Eaton Co. department store April 16 by another man who was sentenced to a year in prison Monday.

John Beresck, 33, of 536 Johnson, was sentenced to four months in prison when he pleaded guilty to stealing a sweater and a steam iron from the T. Eaton Co. department store.

A security officer testified that he observed the accused in the appliance section of the store April 20 about 1:40 p.m. with a shopping bag.

He watched Berecsk put the iron into the bag and leave the store.

When apprehended outside the store, he admitted taking the sweater that was also in the bag. The total value of the items was $47.93.

Ostler described Berecsk as a "persistent thief" when he learned he had a criminal record dating back to 1958 with several theft and related convictions.

Louis J. Sutkowski, 68, of 1003 Hillside, received a suspended sentence and was placed on a six-month probation for theft under $50.

He was guilty of taking a package of fish and a package of hamburger meat, worth $1.20, from the Canada Safeway store, 2635 Quadra, March 10 without paying for them.

When the lady security officer tried to apprehend the accused outside the store, he ran, dropping the items and had to be stopped with the help of a passing customer who heard the woman's screams for help.

Ostler said he was giving the suspended sentence because of the accused's age and his limited income.

Robert A. Fish, 18, of 2157 Crescent, was fined $350 for possession of marijuana.

He was checked by poolice at View and Cook about 11:10 p.m. April 10 and he had some of the substance at the time.

He pleaded guilty to the offence when he appeared before Ostler April 13.

Cavan A. Butler, 21, of 1045 Goldstream, was also fined $350 for possession of marijuana.

He had about one-half ounce of the substance in his jacket when he was searched by police about 4:30 p.m. April 10 and pleaded guilty in court April 13.

Kenneth F. Clements, 20, of 463 Superior, was given a suspended sentence and placed on probation for a year for possession of marijuana.

He had a small bag of it in his coat pocket when searched by police about 9:30 p.m. April 10 and he pleaded guilty in court April 13.

Ostler said, referring to the presentence report, that the accused had been "shockingly abused" while growing up but was now living in a good family situation.

James M. Prior, 18, of 928 Cloverdale, was committed for trial in a higher court Monday for possession of safebreaking instruments.

He was committed by Ostler at the end of a preliminary hearing.

Free Accommodation Offer Boost for Day Care Plans

A proposed community-run day care centre for Victoria West moved two steps closer Tuesday night.

A meeting of 15 men and women at Victoria West elementary school under the chairmanship of Family and Children's Service social worker Ken Levitt received an offer to use the ground floor of the Vic West Community Bible Church as a site for the centre.

Ivor Worrall, an elder with the church, showed the group the church's ground floor.

Located on Raynor Street virtually next door to a picket-sized playground, the building's layout encouraged the group including Miss Gwynneth Davies, a retired teacher who plans to work free for the centre once it gets under way.

Pending fire, health and building inspectors' approval the day care centre can be licensed by the provincial social welfare department after the group is officially incorporated as a society under the Societies Act.

As a second step the group formed an executive committee to initiate incorporation proceedings next Monday.

FIRST FOR ISLAND

Levitt said that if the day care centre gets started "it will be the first of its kind on Vancouver Island." He added that since the offer to use the church was free, the group would have no trouble meeting expenses.

The provincial government would grant the centre $3.25 a day for each child. At present stages of planning this means the group would be able to work with more than $700 a month.

The centre hopes to open with 15 children on a half-day basis. Further assistance will be given by Jane Gurr, director of day care centres for the Family and Children's Service.

AREA NEGLECTED

Levitt was pleased to see a good turnout at the meeting since he feels that Vic West has been "sadly neglected in almost every area."

The Family and Children's Service has been restricted to operating only two day care centres so it plans to develop other community run centres in the future.

"We will do this as time permits," said Levitt.

Because the group will incorporate into a non-profit society, costs of sending children to the centre will be low, scaled to the person's ability to pay.

Friday Payday Plan Coming for Teachers

Greater Victoria school board has come out in favor of paying the district's 1,316 teachers on the last Friday of each month, but there's a catch.

The provision won't go into effect until next year at the earliest.

Trustees approved a motion from the board's finance committee Monday that payment of salaries "by direct bank deposit be made a condition of employment effective immediately."

But the second part of the motion said payment of salaries would begin next October "provided that 85 per cent of this school district's total teaching force is participating in and continues to participate in the direct bank deposit method. . . ."

That means payment of salaries on the last Friday of the month can't begin this year because half of next year's staff has already been hired, trustee Allan McKinnon pointed out.

Payment of teachers on a Friday is considered a courtesy extended by the board to enable teachers to go to their bank the same day they are paid.

Disturber Fined $50

"There has been all too much disorderly conduct in beer houses lately," Judge William Ostler said Tuesday when he imposed a $50 fine on Brian J. Tucker, 20, of 1551 Arrow, for wilful damage.

Tucker had pleaded guilty to damaging beer glasses and furniture at the Churchill Hotel April 20. Estimated damage was $3.15.

Court was told Tucker had been evicted from the pub about 9 p.m. and had thrown a chair breaking some glasses in the process.

He returned to the pub a half hour later and broke another glass.

Ostler said the beer parlors were for "enjoyment, not riots" and ordered Tucker to pay the cost of the damage with the fine.

Catastrophe Feared

WASHINGTON (AP) — Air pollution will set off a catastrophic warming of the earth within 200 years unless man checks his plunge toward an ov- checks his plunge toward an over-populated, industrialized scientist said today.

The release of increasing quantities of carbon dioxide and thermal pollution into the atmosphere threatens to change global weather and melt the Antarctic ice cap, flooding wide areas, Dr. J. Murray Mitchell Jr. said.

He said man may begin to notice the change by the end of this century.

HEAVY WATER DEBATED

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Premier G. I. Smith told the Nova Scotia legislature Tuesday night that construction of the Deuterium of Canada Ltd. heavy water plant at Glace Bay, N.S., poured about $100,000,000 into the province's economy.

His comment came after Liberal Leader Gerald Regan said the people of Nova Scotia want more information before they give any more "blank cheques" for Deuterium which he said will owe the taxpayers $264,158,670 after 20 years.

Mr. Regan was attacking the government decision to go ahead with the rehabilitation of the plant without accepting an opposition resolution for an examination by an independent commission of Canadian businessmen and scientists.

Mr. Smith said Du Pont of Canada Ltd., which did a survey of what it would require to get the plant into operation, as well as Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd., thought the plant would work.

In other provinces:

St. John's—A proposed oil refinery to be built at Come-By-Chance will employ about 2,000 men during an 18-to-24-month construction period and cost $155,000,000, the Newfoundland legislature was told.

Homer White, president of Newfoundland Refining Co., a Crown corporation that will operate the refinery, said another 450 men will be hired for construction of a $19,000,000 wharf near the plant.

Toronto—Ontario will not consider obstacles to immigration despite rising unemployment unless "immigration can be seen to be having adverse effects," Premier John Robarts told a questioner. He was asked why Ontario House in London continues to advertise job vacancies while unemployment is rising.

Announcing Modess deodorant napkins.

Very soon, maybe even this week, you'll need a new supply of sanitary napkins. And because you have a woman's concern for your femininity, you'll probably want to try the new non-scented MODESS deodorant napkins.

Here are the answers to nine questions you may wonder about. They've been supplied by Anne Gilbert, Director of Education at Johnson & Johnson.

Q. Exactly what is a deodorant napkin?

A. A deodorant napkin is exactly what it sounds like: a sanitary napkin to which a deodorant has been added in order to retard the problem of menstrual odor.

Q. Where is the deodorant?

A. The deodorant is applied over the entire surface of the napkins while they're being manufactured.

Q. Is there a fragrance to the deodorant?

A. None whatsoever. A MODESS deodorant napkin can never clash with the perfume you happen to be wearing. More important, there's no trace of scent to reveal the fact that you're wearing a napkin.

Q. What kind of deodorant is it?

A. It is gentle and safe. Its deodorizing ingredient is hexachlorophene, well-known and medically-approved as a very effective bacteriostatic agent. In non-medical terms, that simply means hexachlorophene inhibits the growth of bacteria.

Q. That's what causes odor?

A. Yes. Menstrual odor is caused by the growth of bacteria. It's a natural process that no one can stop. You can cope with the problem, though, by being fastidious about your program of personal cleanliness and by using the new MODESS deodorant napkins.

Q. But surely not all women have odor problems?

A. In varying degrees, yes, all women do. If you haven't experienced the problem yet, unfortunately that's no guarantee it will never happen. The point is, why should you worry? Now that MODESS deodorant napkins are available, you can feel fresh and confident every day of the month.

Q. What about irritation?

A. A team of Johnson & Johnson chemists worked for months testing different deodorant formulae. The one they finally approved is not only effective, but also extraordinarily gentle and completely non-irritating. We wouldn't settle for less.

Q. How long will the deodorant stay effective?

A. If you've been buying napkins in boxes of 48's, you know the box usually lies open for several months. Well, you can continue to buy boxes of 48's. The last MODESS deodorant napkin you use will protect you just as effectively as the first one did.

Q. What about vaginal sprays and napkin powders?

A. By all means, continue to use them. Your MODESS deodorant napkin won't interfere at all. Rather, it will let you feel extra secure. And during your period, that extra feeling of confidence is especially nice to have.

Pick the MODESS deodorant napkin that's right for you.

1. MODESS Regular Napkins
Rectangular in shape, but gently molded at both ends. A moisture-proof polyethylene shield is bonded to the outside, extends across the bottom and part way up the sides. Try this exceptionally protective deodorant napkin if your flow is regular but you have spotting problems.

2. MODESS CAREFREE Napkins

3. MODESS SOFF-FORM Napkins
These are deep-tapered napkins with a moisture-proof shield inside. They have extra depth for super absorbency. For you if your flow is exceptionally heavy and a tapered shape fits you best.

Anne Gilbert is Director of Education at Johnson & Johnson. It's her job to know all about sanitary napkins and to pass this knowledge on to you. If you ever have questions about MODESS deodorant napkins or feminine hygiene, write to her.

It Went Bang and I Began to Worry—Lovell

LOVELL
. . . long way from home

By PAUL RECER

HOUSTON (AP) — "A rather large bang" and rapidly failing oxygen pressure and electrical power told the Apollo 13 astronauts they were in serious trouble 202,000 miles from home, the spacemen say.

"My concern was increasing all the time," mission commander James Lovell said Tuesday. "It went from 'I wonder what this is going to do to the moon landing' to 'I wonder if we can get back home again.'"

Lovell, Fred Haise and John Swigert told of their brush with death in space during a televised and broadcast news conference.

The astronauts didn't know what caused the No. 2 oxygen tank in their service module to explode, but that they thought the cause would be discovered and rectified for future flights.

"I foresee that we can get this incident over with and can charge ahead," Lovell said.

INVESTIGATORS MEET

A board investigating the accident met for the first time Tuesday night, hours after the board chairman, Dr. Edgar Cortright, had announced the names of other members.

They include Neil Armstrong, first man to walk the moon, seven officials of the space agency, the air force and Atomic Energy Commission, legal counsel, a technical support man, three observers and liaison men for Congress and the press.

"It is my hope we can reach an adequate, effective determination of what happened within three or four weeks," said Cortright.

The explosion crippled the spacecraft, forced cancellation of its moon landing and imperilled the lives of the astronauts for four days while they fought to bring their craft back to earth safely.

When the trouble started, Swigert said, "I felt a vibration accompanying the bang—not a large vibration, a shudder."

PROBLEM WAS SURVIVAL

"Survival now became a matter of initiative and ingenuity," Lovell said.

"The only way to survive the situation was to transfer to the LM (lunar module). It was our only chance to get home."

"There were moments when I didn't know whether we had enough consumables (oxygen, water and electricity) to get home," Lovell said. "In a situation like that there's only one thing to do. You just keep going."

Asked whether they felt an awareness of "the Infinite Power watching over you," Swigert replied: "If you're asking whether I prayed, I certainly did."

All three of the astronauts said they suffered from the cold of space invading the spacecraft after the warming systems were off.

"I think just prior to re-entry it was down to about 38 degrees," Lovell said.

"I recall that we went in there to get some hot dogs one day and it was like reaching into the freezer for the food."

As the astronauts approached earth, they jettisoned the service module, the supply section of the spacecraft where the explosion occurred. They saw and photographed the damage.

"I couldn't see exactly what was damaged," Lovell said. "I could see material hanging out from the interior."

Lovell was quoted during the spaceflight as saying it would be a long time before another moon flight.

"I don't believe that any more," he said. "I believe we can analyse our problems. I wouldn't be scared to fly again."

The astronauts will continue their debriefing with space experts today and Thursday. They have been asked to testify Friday in Washington at a congressional committee hearing.

Tacky Answer

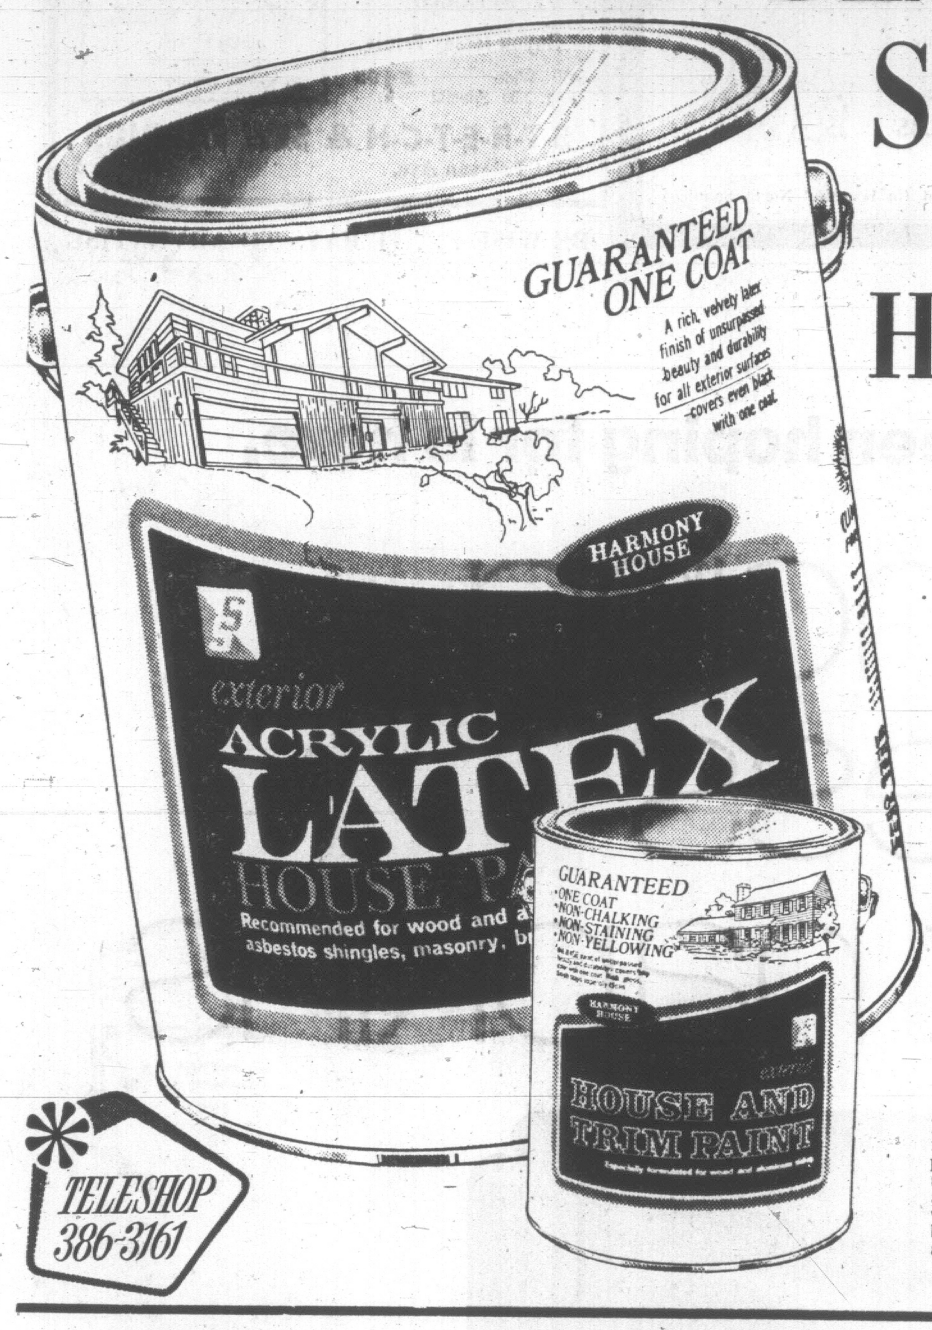

AMBLECOTE, England (CP) — Ivan Mocroft found a sticky solution to the problem of persons leaning against his garden wall at a bus stop by his Staffordshire home. He coasted the wall with gooey tar which met with complaints from persons who ruined their clothes, but a lawyer said Mocroft was within his rights in protecting his property.

GALLUP POLL

Grit Support In Tiny Dip

By the Canadian Institute of Public Opinion

For the first time since last August, the Institute's continuing study of political preferences shows a dip in what has been a rising support for the Liberal party. The dip is, in statistical terms, slight, and its main significance is in the fact that it reverses what was a consistent eight-month trend.

	Liberal	PC	NDP	Social Credit and Others
CIPO pre-election report (June, 1968)	47%	29%	18%	6%
Election, June 25, '68	46	32	16	6
September, 1968	49	26	17	8
November	52	27	14	7
February, 1969	51	27	15	7
April	47	28	18	7
June	41	30	22	7
August	39	29	24	8
December	42	28	20	10
February, 1970	43	27	19	11
TODAY	40	28	22	10

Because they are based on samplings, findings of the Institute are subject to a possible error up to four percentage points.

The drop shown today in Liberal strength is just within this margin, so could be statistical. Only further polling will reveal the extent to which it is a genuine trend—or "trendlet." While some of the loss appears to come from Ontario, it is heaviest, proportionately, in Western Canada.

In the most recent study, the New Democratic Party continues to show strength, as indicated in the table above. This strength does not appear to be concentrated in either of the two areas from which this party draws its greatest support—Ontario and Western Canada—but is evident in both regions.

A glance at the record above shows that the NDP is the only party which has gained from its election standing—up 6 percentage points. The Liberals are down 6 points, and the Conservatives down 4 points.

Inflation Being Beaten

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Edgar Benson told the Commons Tuesday that government policies to fight inflation are gradually working.

However, "nobody likes the very high rate of unemployment in the country" that accompanies the battle, he told New Democrat Leader T. C. Douglas.

The rate of unemployment in March, 1970, had been equalled or exceeded in eight of the last 14 years, Benson said. The record was in March, 1961, under a Conservative government.

Prime Minister Trudeau told Douglas the government has policies for areas affected by high unemployment. Douglas had asked whether the government would end inflation restraints in cities hit by high unemployment.

Replying to George Hees (PC — Prince Edward-Hastings), Trudeau said the government is fighting inflation to prevent greater unemployment.

BOURASSA
. . . a provincial affair

Ottawa Ties Main Quebec Issue

QUEBEC (CP) — With the Quebec general election seven days away, party leaders continued hammering out their election promises Tuesday, calling for an economically and socially stable Quebec, unattached to federal apron strings.

Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand says the entry of federal Liberals into the campaign for the April 29 election "would be the best thing" for his Union Nationale party.

He told a news conference in Mont Joli in the Gaspe he would welcome participation by the federal Liberals "because the citizens of Quebec . . . never put all their eggs in the same basket."

Liberal Leader Robert Bourassa said in an interview that the Quebec election is strictly a provincial affair and he is not soliciting the support of the federal Liberals "and I do not anticipate their entry in the campaign.

"I do not wish to comment on rumors, but it would surprise me to see them join in, except on an individual basis."

HAD BEEN RUMORS

Published reports earlier this week speculated that federal Liberals, concerned over the apparent rising popularity of the separatist Party Quebecois, were reconsidering their hands-off attitude.

Meanwhile, Rene Levesque, leader of the separatist Parti Quebecois, told 350 persons jammed into a school basement that "on the day Quebec becomes a country, all its citizens will become legal citizens of Quebec, even if they've only been here three months.

"They'll be Quebecers the same as we are . . . with the same rights, the same benefits, no special privileges.

And, Roland Morin, leader of the Quebec New Democratic Party, told a meeting of workers that planned economic development is the main instrument for the cultural and social fulfilment of Quebec.

"Quebecers should first use money that is available in Quebeca to develop our economy."

He said: "foreign investment must allow for a sufficient control by a Quebec government . . . and this investment must offer no risk of defeating the objectives of economic independence here."

The NDP has 14 candidates in the election while the Union Nationale, the Liberals and the Parti Quebecois each has a full slate of 108. The Ralliement Creditiste has 99.

Mr. Bertrand later criticized the federal government for parachuting the Creditistes into the election "to take away votes from the Union Nationale in certain northern ridings."

And, he warned that if the Parti Quebecois took power following the election, a dictatorship would be imposed by it because Rene Levesque is unable to control "varied elements" within its ranks.

He said the intolerance of the separatist party indicates that the Parti Quebecois would abolish democratic liberities . . . "because there really are revolutionary elements in its ranks."

FACTS HELD BACK

Mr. Bourassa also attacked the separatist party at a meeting in Montreal, accusing it of misleading the voters by failing to reveal the problems and the economic consequences of independence.

No More Rain Needed Here

By ELIZABETH FORBES

Let it rain! Let it pour! Until a few weeks ago that was the theme song of Gerater Victoria Water District Commissioner Ron Upward as he looked at the half empty lakes and streams in the watershed area and wondered whether he'd see them filled before the summer season commenced.

Forbes

Now it's quite different. The water commissioner is sitting in his office out near Thetis Cove and telling anyone who drops in to talk to him, as I did the other day, that the crisis is over.

Early April rains did the trick. Lakes and streams are full. Reservoirs are up to capacity. And Upward leans back in his chair, smiles and says quietly "Now we should get through the summer."

Then, in his cautious way, he qualifies that word "should." Next six months sees the heaviest drain on the water supply, he points out. Domestic use which averages 60 per cent of the water supply throughout the year (with industry a mere 40 per cent) rises in these months.

By the end of summer reservoirs and lakes will again be more than half empty. "And if we get the long hot summer people are predicting some restrictions might have to be imposed."

Once the new tunnel and dam are completed in September "we will be in a better position."

However, the population of Greater Victoria is rising right now by as much as four to five thousand a year. If that continues, when the year 2,000 rolls around, our population could be nudging the 350 thousand mark.

"Predicated on those figures, in 30 years, the new tunnel and dam will be too small," Commissioner Upward says. Then he adds that plans are already in preparation "to cope with the problem when the time comes."

Right now there is only one pipeline from the tunnel to the dam. By the year 2,000, if our population grows as visioned, there will be need for two.

There is also the problem of getting increased water supplies into Victoria.

At present there are two, and in one place three pipes to Langford. But on the city side there's a bottleneck between Thetis Cove and Thetis Lake "where roads, railways, telephone, hydro and our present pipeline are all huddled into a small acreage."

Plenty of water is going through to Victoria right now, Upward says, but when a new trunk line is needed — and that could be within two or three years, the only place left to run it is along the Trans-Canada highway. "And that is going to be expensive because of the existence of so much rock."

No matter how the population grows, there is only one watershed (five big lakes and Goldstream) to serve the Greater Victoria area. No more.

At present Sooke Lake holds 11.4 billion gallons and Goldstream has a three billion reserve. There could be billions more, if needed.

We're lucky, the commissioner reminded me that our water is "rain softened" and it has a good taste "in most instances."

It does get discolored on occasions, especially at the end of the summer season. Then the lakes are low and grasses and reeds (as much as four feet high) exposed to light and air turn yellow and die. "Then the rains come, small bits of dead leaves and twigs get through the outlet screens and water is discolored until the condition is cleared up."

In summer, lake temperature in the watershed, can rise to 70 or 75 degrees. With the result that people in Langford (closest to the source) cannot drink water from the tap. It's too warm. In reverse it will be "icy cold" in winter.

Oak Bay, on the other hand, farthest from the source, gets the coolest water in summer "because it runs for some miles underground and the temperature tumbles." In reverse, Oak Bay water has a chance to "warm up a bit" before it comes from the tap in the winter.

PHILIP LEARNS AUSSIE LANGUAGE

GREEN ISLAND, Australia (UPI) — Prince Philip Tuesday drew on his knowledge of Australiana to describe a photographer as "running around like a blue-arsed fly."

Apparently annoyed at the presence of a large number of newsmen and tourists, the prince asked a photographer if he was getting enough pictures.

"I hope so, sir," the photographer replied.

"You should do, the prince said. "You've been running around like a blue-arsed fly."

Separatist Campaign Matches Its Title—Operation Tornado

By DAVE BAZAY

QUEBEC (CP) — The separatist Parti Quebecois, galvanizing the energies of Quebec's activist youth, has mounted an election campaign matching its title, Operation Tornado.

The separatists opened their well-organized campaign with a rafter-rattling rally of 15,000 at Montreal and plan to top this with an even bigger meeting just prior to election day, April 29.

The Parti Quebecois meetings have been strong crowd-pullers along the campaign trail so far, giving separatists the impression that they are about to be swept into power.

At the centre of the activity, gathering strength for the last two years, is Rene Levesque, the former Quebec cabinet minister who quit the Liberals in 1967 to campaign for political independence of Quebec province.

Back in Montreal from a rousing 16-riding tour of the Gaspe Peninsula and central Quebec, the weathered separatist leader flashed his customary boyish grin and told reporters:

"We weren't expecting this.

"I believe that there's a hell of a wave in our favor and that it can't diminish."

NOT SO EASY

But the 47-year-old journalist, one of the prominent personalities in Quebec politics for the last decade, is well aware that it's one thing to get people out to separatist meetings and another to get separatists elected.

Two separatist parties ran candidates in the 1966 provincial election, but failed to elect any to the 108-seat legislature. Together they got about eight per cent of the popular vote.

In 1944, a non-separatist group of anti-war Quebec nationalists known as the Bloc Populaire drew a crowd estimated at between 15,000 and 25,000 to an election meeting in Montreal during a tramways strike.

The meeting was by far the biggest of the 1944 provincial election campaign, but Bloc Populaire elected only four candidates to a 91-seat legislature, getting about 15 per cent of the popular vote.

With these examples in mind, Mr. Levesque has been mobilizing resources for the last two years in an unprecedented effort to sell separatism to the Quebec electorate.

SLICK, SERIOUS

The Parti Quebecois, founded in 1968, has emerged in this campaign as a pesky 50,000-member party with a bright campaign, including slick publicity and a full slate of 108 candidates.

The party's computer-equipped organization includes a special television studio to produce the 30-minute programs that have been telecast once a week by 11 private TV channels across Quebec since last fall.

But big crowds don't necessarily mean a big vote

Radio and TV advertising have been accelerated for the campaign along with the party's share of free-time broadcasts on the CBC.

The Parti Quebecois even plans to publish papers in English to seek the vote of Quebec's anglophones.

Three Parti Quebecois trailers are touring the province, selling the party much in the manner that Canada told itself its story in 1967 with the centennial caravan.

Its election material includes 1,000,000 party programs, Levesque posters, red, white and blue placards, billboards, campaign buttons and even penny match booklets.

The party finances itself by passing six-quart baskets around at meetings. Under the Election Act, Parti Quebecois candidates who get 20 per cent of the vote will qualify for partial refund of their election expenses.

The separatist candidates—some of whom have been working in their ridings for months—include economist Jacques Parizeau, 39, economic adviser to former premiers Jean Lesage, a Liberal, and the late Daniel Johnson of the Union Nationale.

In the campaign, the Parti Quebecois has thrown the prestige of Mr. Parizeau against the federalists who argue that Quebec's standard of living would decline if Quebec broke out of Confederation.

Mr. Parizeau, an urbane rumpled-suit professor educated at the London School of Economics, has furnished the Parti Quebecois with one of its campaign themes: "La souverainete c'est la prosperite"—Sovereignty is Prosperity.

TRY RESTART ECONOMY

Mr. Parizeau views sovereign Quebec as a $6,000,000,000 motor that would speed up an economy stalled, he says, by waste and conflict between the federal and provincial governments.

The Parti Quebecois is pushing for a brand of separatism somewhat milder than the old Rassemblement pour l'Independance Nationale, that wanted a clean break with Canada.

Mr. Levesque's party advocates independence of Quebec—political sovereignty—and a common market-type linkup with the other Canadian provinces—association.

The Parti Quebecois' political opponents concede that Mr. Levesque has the majority of Quebec's politically-active youth behind him in his drive to set up an independent French state.

But the Parti Quebecois also appeals to those who nurture the centuries-old dream of French statehood in North America.

HAS NOVEL APPEAL

Tht Parti Quebecois is a new party. And, as the emergence of the Creditiste movement demonstrates, Quebec is a province where many seem fed up with "old parties."

It's also the party of Rene Levesque, who has a following of his own. He is one of the great one-man shows of Quebec politics, rising from a small town in the Gaspe to careers as a war correspondent, television commentator and cabinet minister.

Mr. Levesque, a diminutive chain smoker with a tired face and baggy eyes, is a man of incredible energy. On a recent four-day trek, he travelled 2,000 miles by air, 700 by road, making 19 speeches. He's a marathon talker.

Since 1967, he has devoted himself to regrouping divided separatist forces. He has tried to rid the independence movement of its old image of recklessness and replace it with a new image of seriousness, respectability.

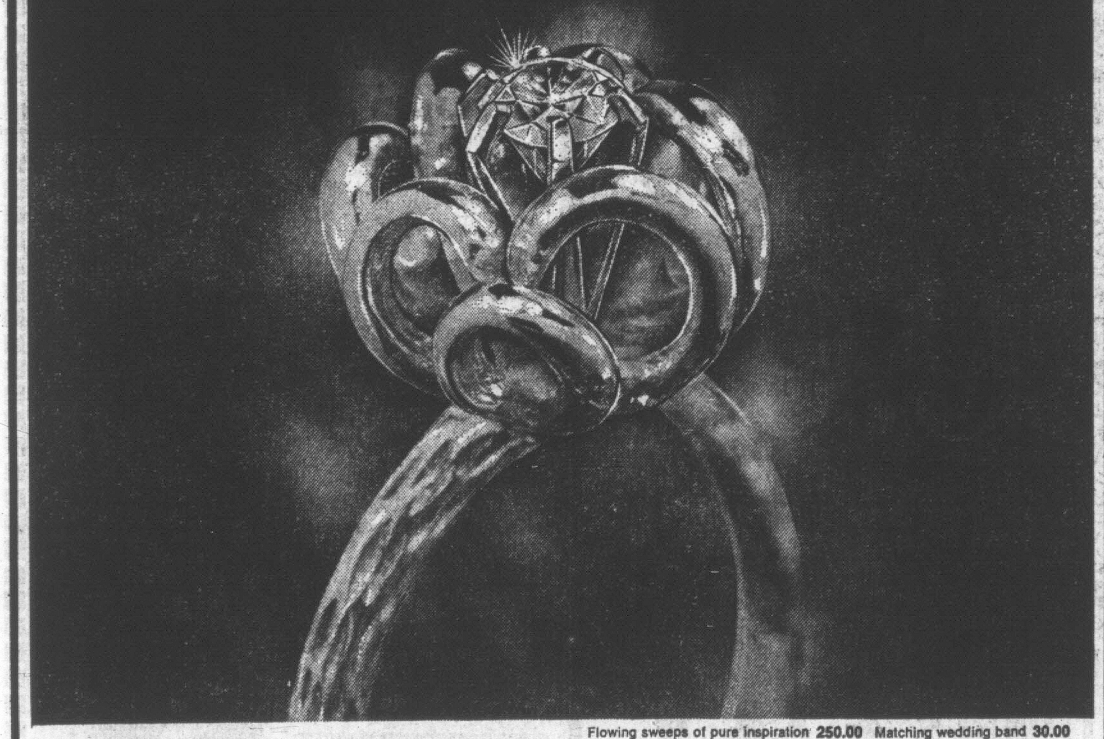

He won his own riding of Montreal Laurier as a Liberal in 1960, 1962 and 1966 general elections.

SPLITS TIME

The separatist leader has spent three days a week campaigning in Laurier against a local Liberal organization out to get him and an Italian-Canadian candidate for the Union Nationale.

Jobless Pile Up In Calgary Area

CALGARY (CP) — An abnormal influx of people looking for jobs in the Calgary area has increased unemployment insurance claimants by 22 per cent from last year.

Ted Palmer, local office manager for the Unemployment Insurance Commission, said 10,777 people were seeking benefits at the end of March compared with 8,872 from the same time last year.

"The two totals would be reasonably close if we hadn't had the number of transfers.

"Over the six weeks prior to March 23, 500 persons transfered into our area who were claiming insurance."

Until two months ago, the number of benefit claims were fewer than at the same time the year before.

Transfers came mostly from Ontario, Saskatchewan and British Columbia.

Restrictions Hit

WINNIPEG (CP) — Canada's future as a meat exporter could be bright if restraints affecting livestock production are removed, Dr. G. A. McEachern of Ottawa, president of the Agricultural Economic Research Council, said Tuesday. He referred to government restrictions on movement of feed grain.

4-H Clubs Meet

WINNIPE G (CP) — The Canadian Council of 4-H clubs announced today it will hold the 39th annual convention here this year to commemorate Manitoba's centennial. Manitoba Premier Ed Schreyer will address the delegates who will be in Winnipeg May 24-29. The first Canadian 4-H club was founded in Manitoba in 1913.

Eskimo Needs Help

CALGARY (CP) — The Eskimo will become extinct unless his Canadian neighbors to the south help him to survive, Michael Marsden, professor of geography at Sir George Williams University, Montreal, said Tuesday. The Eskimo cannot live off the resources of the North, he said.

Pipeline Urged

WINNIPEG (C) — The former head of Manitoba's royal commission on northern transportation has suggested an oil pipeline should be built from Canada's Arctic Shelf to the port of Churchill. Lawyer Art Mauro told the Hudson Bay Route Association annual convention that such a pipeline probably would be more feasible than a suggested line to the United States border at Gretna, Man.

Teachers See Selves In New Role

EDMONTON (CP) — Increased federal spending for education is advocated by the Alberta Teachers' Association in a brief to the Worth Commission on Educational Planning.

Most funds for universities, technical schools and adult education should come from the federal government by the end of the century, the association recommended Tuesday.

Research spending should be equal to one per cent of the operating costs of all schools and paid for by the federal government.

The brief visualized schools in 1999 with teachers having complete freedom, students having a voice in administration and curriculum and principals acting as catalysts and advisors.

Elementary and secondary school teachers would function in much the same manner as university professors by the end of the century.

Teachers would work on higher levels of thinking — human relations and social skills — while information would be imparted through kits containing films, videotapes, books and products not yet invented.

The association said teachers should continue to strive for a voice in all decisions which affect the practice of teaching.

CN Rewards Edmonton Truck Driver

EDMONTON (CP) — The CNR gave a $100 cheque Tuesday to an Edmonton truck driver who pulled a string of railway cars to safety during a fire and then stayed to help put out the blaze.

Eddie Cutts, who owns and operates Nation-Wide Transport of Edmonton, was driving a truck through McLure, B.C., 25 miles north of Kamloops, on April 1 when he noticed a string of CNR cars on fire, the railway said in a statement.

He drove his truck onto the tracks, attached his truck to 11 railway cars that were in danger of catching fire and pulled them to safety.

After that, he stayed to help extinguish the fire on the remaining cars.

B.C. NEWS ROUNDUP

Trail Gets Apology

VANCOUVER (CP)—George Davidson, president of the CBC, Tuesday apologized to the city of Trail for a television news item last month dealing with air pollution in the area.

In a letter to city council, Davidson said he studied the report, which appeared on the CBC TV national news March 6 and found it confusing, misleading, and, in some details, incorrect.

He said the item, which dealt with lead poisoning of young horses, included a statement of opinion on the city of Trail and Cominco Ltd., a violation of CBC news policy.

The report said the people of Trail don't trust Cominco and health experts, and that the city is continually obscured by smog from the company's smelter.

Cominco officials said a similar apology has been sent to the company by the CBC.

Man Jailed

TERRACE (CP) — Weldon Roy Gordon, 27, of Vancouver Tuesday was sentenced to 18 months in jail after he was found guilty in Terrace provincial court of defrauding a timber company. Police said Gordon had caused cheques to be issued to persons not employed by the Twin River company between March, 1968, and August, 1969. Police said the net amount of the cheques totalled nearly $30,000.

Ward Acquired

VANCOUVER (CP) — Welfare Minister Phil Gaglardi Tuesday was given custody of a 14-year-old problem child. The boy was committed to the minister's custody after a juvenile court judge was told the boy's parents could not handle him and that the Children's Aid Society had nothing to offer. Mr. Gaglardi said that when formally notified he will look after the boy and "find a spot for him."

Parks Pillaged

TERRACE (CP) — Raoul Lussier, regional parks director, said Tuesday that RCMP and parks personnel are maintaining special patrols to all parks in the area to stop a wave of vandalism. Lussier said hundreds of dollars worth of damage has occurred in picnic areas and camp sites in the Prince Rupert, Terrace and Smithers districts. Picnic tables have been smashed, signs and signposts thrown into lakes and garbage cans riddled with bullets.

WILLIAMS LAKE (CP) — The Indian Friendship Centre here was officially opened Tuesday by Alex Fraser, Social Credit MLA for Cariboo. The centre, operated by the Indian Friendship Society, provides a stopping place for Indians. It operates out of a small remodelled house.

Contract Awarded

Ministers Say Opposition Hurting Henderson's Role as Watchdog

OTTAWA (CP) — The government denied Tuesday that it has criticized Auditor-General Maxwell Henderson for carrying out his duties. But cabinet ministers said the opposition is jeopardizing Mr. Henderson's objectivity by dragging him into partisan politics.

Treasury Board President C. M. Drury said the Commons public accounts committee, under Conservative Chairman Alf Hales, had instructed Mr. Henderson to judge policies laid down by Parliament.

Mr. Drury referred specifically to Mr. Henderson's criticism of spending on the scrapped Northumberland Strait crossing.

If Mr. Henderson was asked to give an opinion on matters that had been "thoroughly debated in the House, he runs the risk of being drawn into such a debate in a partisan way."

"I suggest this would place him in the dangerous position of losing the reputation for that objectivity which I think is essential to this high office."

REVERSE CHANGE

However, Conservatives, New Democrats and Creditistes said it is the government that is trying to silence or get rid of Mr. Henderson.

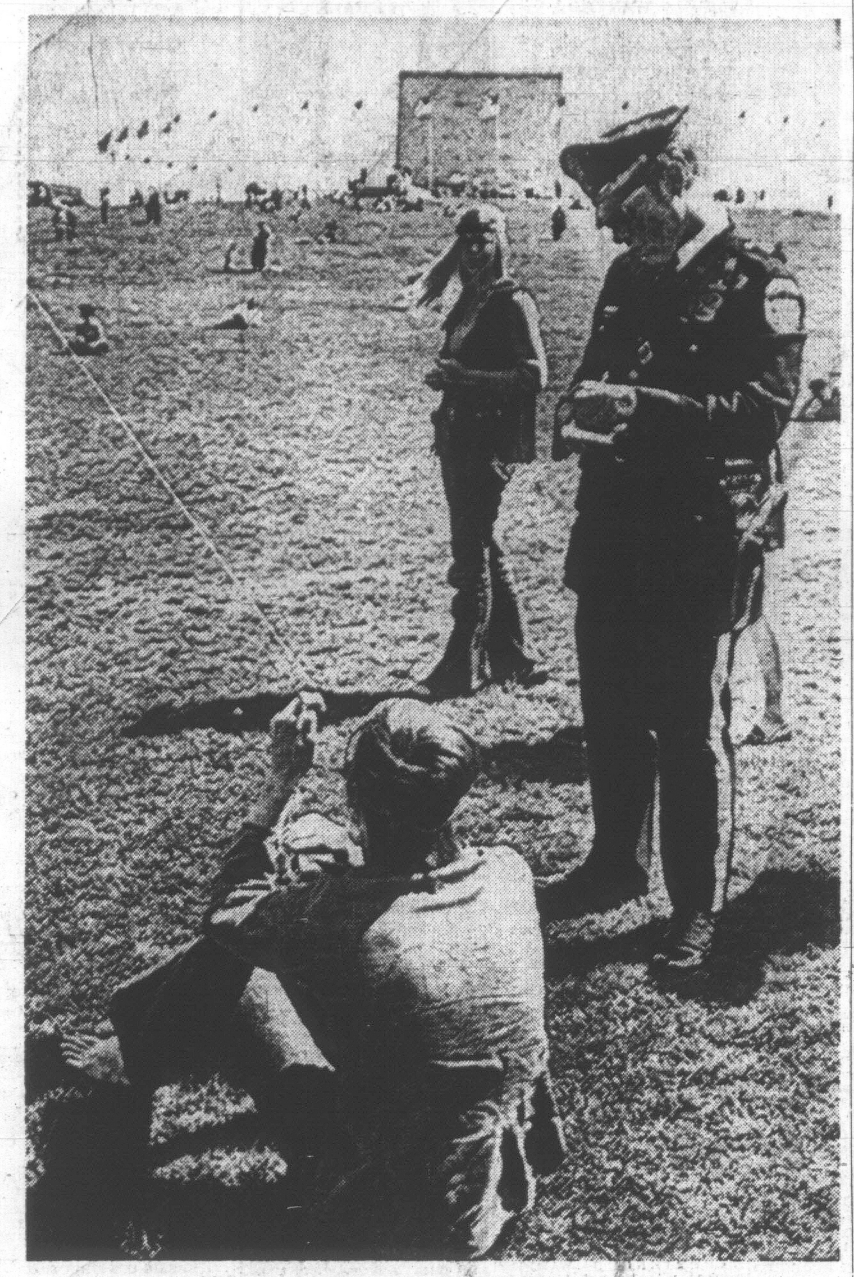

The subject had been simmering for several weeks after Mr. Henderson was criticized by government members following publication last month of his 1969 report. More than 200 items of government spending were raked over the coals in the report.

A non-confidence motion by Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield condemned the government for criticizing Mr. Henderson for carrying out his duties according to the law—a charge Mr. Drury and Privy Council President Donald Macdonald denied.

The motion reasserted support of "the principle of unfettered parliamentary scrutiny of government expenditures," which Mr. Drury and Mr. Macdonald said they support.

The Conservative motion was defeated 118 to 77 with 57 Conservatives, 14 New Democrats, five Creditistes and Independent Perry Ryan (Toronto Spadina) voting against 118 Liberals.

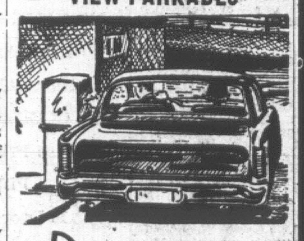

An NDP amendment also went down 118 to 77. Introduced by NDP Leader T. C. Douglas, it commended Mr. Henderson for "drawing Parliament's attention to the improper concession of $180,000,000 to motor-vehicle manufacturers by order-in-council."

Also, special thanks to Dr. C. H. Felix and to the officers of the Esquimalt Police Force whose kindness was very much appreciated.—Sheila, Darlain and Jacqueline.

The gratitude in our hearts can never be fully expressed, but we want our friends, relatives, and neighbours to know how much their kind words, expressions of sympathy and floral tributes have meant to us during our recent time of sorrow in the sad loss of our husband and father, Claude H. Creed — The Creed Family.

9 IN MEMORIAM

McLAUGHLIN — In loving memory of "Paddy", William Thomas McLaughlin, my dearly beloved husband, who departed this life April 22, 1969.
Tho' you have sailed away on His Eternal Sea,
Within my heart you live.
I see thee still and hear thy voice,
O gentle Soul — dear treasured love —
Thy name be Immortality. —
—With everlasting love, Dorothy Jean.

THOMAS — In loving memory of our mother and grandmother, Mrs. Fanny Thomas, who passed away April 22, 1968.
"Ever loved,
Ever remembered."
—Frances, Kitty, Dorothy, Eileen and families.

WELLS — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, George Wells, who passed away suddenly April 22, 1965.
We often sit and think of him
when we are all alone,
For memory is the only friend that grief can call its own.
Like ivy on the withered oak,
when all other things decay,
Our love for him will still keep green and never fade away.
—Ever remembered by his loving wife, Lilian, and daughter, Shirley.

THE COURTSHIP OF EDDIE'S FATHER. 8 p.m., Channels 4 and 6. "Guess Who's Coming to Lunch." (Repeat). Cute show. At Eddie's request, his father invites a new school chum to spend the weekend, and while he's at it, he invites the boy's mother for dinner. Both parties are in for a surprise when they meet (needless to say, neither of them knows the episode's title). Guest star Cicely Tyson and Bill Bixby handle their scenes with charm and just the right touch of humor.

ROOM 222. 8:30 p.m., Channel 4. "Clothes Make the Boy." (Repeat). An appropriate tale for a high school series comes to grips with the problems posed by current styles of student dress. Walt Whitman's outmoded code on the subject is challenged by the student body, and teacher Dixon sides with them most of the way. When the PTA gets in on the scene, the verbal exchanges will strike a familiar note in families with children of high school age.

MEDICAL CENTRE. 9 p.m., Channel 12. (Repeat). Doctors are at each other's throats again. Fighter Joe Gannon is disturbed by the return of a famous surgeon who, in his opinion, is too quick with the knife. War between the two simmers for a while and then breaks into a major flareup over the operation of an ulcer patient. Chad Everett's opponent is leathery John Marley and their duels create most of the interest, although James Daly asserts his authority as boss in a key scene.

MUSIC HALL. 9 p.m., Channel 5. "The Sound of Burt Bacharach." (Repeat). A delight from downbeat to finale. The very talented and personable composer, Burt Bacharach, is given an hour to spotlight his many song hits and pay tribute to his favorite composer, Harold Arlen. Assisting him in the engaging musical feast are the incomparable Lena Horne, the popular Tony Bennett, and the thrilling ballet dancer Edward Villella. A highlight of the show is a rehearsal session with Bacharach putting the finishing touches on the title tune in his Broadway hit, "Promises, Promises," intercut with the artistry of Mr. Villella's solo dance. The Arlen medley comes near the end and it's great, with Lena Horne taking command and sparking both Burt and Tony Bennett.

CBS REPORTS. 10 p.m., Channels 7 and 12. "A Question of Survival." Part III of this report on the health care in America turns to the activities of "Earth Day" with correspondent Walter Cronkite acting as anchorman for a study of our environmental crisis, and coverage of the events taking place all over the country with the problem of survival on their minds.

SPECIAL. 11:30 p.m., Channel 4. "Earth Day—S.O.S. for Survival." This is ABC's special report on today's teach-in on the environment crisis, featuring reports on activities around the country as well as commentary from such experts as Professor Barry Commoner, Presidential adviser Russell Trayne, Senator Edmund Muskie (D — Maine), and interviews with conservation and industry spokesmen.

TONIGHT'S MOVIES

5:30, Channel 12: — A Swirl of Glory (1950 Western), Randolph Scott, Adele Jergens, Raymond Massey. Scott plays a cowboy named Sugarfoot who runs into a whole mess of trouble before this western ends.

5:30, Channel 13: The Horror Chamber of Dr. Faustus (1959 French-Italian Drama), Pierre Barasseur, Alida Valli. Grisly thriller dubbed in English.

8:30, Channel 7: That Touch of Mink (1962 Comedy), Cary Grant, Doris Day, Gig Young. Enjoyable comedy, with beautiful people romping in beautiful settings.

8:30, Channel 8: Darling (1965 Drama), Julie Christie, Dirk Bogarde. Superb, perceptive display of the useless, empty life of a girl who refuses to recognize morality — not a pleasant drama but a potent one.

11:30, Channel 7: On Moonlight Bay (1951 Musical), Doris Day, Gordon MacRae. A nostalgic musical set in the days preceding World War I.

11:40, Channel 2: The Prince Who Was a Thief (1951 Adventure), Tony Curtis, Piper Laurie. A typical Hollywood film about the plush pageantry of the Arabian Nights.

1:05, Channel 5: Legend of a Gunfighter (1966 Western), Toni Frisch, Ron Randell. A gunfighter sets out to seek revenge for the death of his parents.

Vietnamese Survivors Back in Camp

OUTSIDE SAANG (Reuters) — About 60 survivors of a group of Vietnamese civilians, ordered by Cambodian troops to march toward Viet Cong positions, were driven back to a detention centre Tuesday night after one-third of the group was killed or wounded in Viet Cong and Cambodian crossfire.

About 30 of the Vietnamese, including children, women and old men, were unaccounted for after they were caught in the crossfire near Saang, 18 miles from the capital of Phnom Penh.

The horrified civilians were ordered to march toward the Viet Cong, in what a local Cambodian commander described as "a very new experiment to appeal to the conscience of the other side."

No sign of any dead or dying could be seen Tuesday night from forward positions of the Cambodian army just outside the town, which was captured by the Viet Cong Sunday.

The Vietnamese were brought here on trucks at noon Tuesday. A loudspeaker broadcast the Cambodian troops' intentions to the Viet Cong, who were believed to be occupying a wrecked school and other buildings about 300 yards away.

GIVEN WHITE FLAG

The Cambodians gave leaflets to the Vietnamese appealing to the Communists to leave Cambodia, then ordered them to march toward the town under a white flag.

One eyewitness said a Viet Cong raised himself from cover and held up a hand in a halting gesture as the group of Vietnamese approached.

A shot was fired, and both sides opened up, with the civilians in the direct line of fire.

But, Brig.-Gen. Sosthene Fernandez, commander of Cambodia's Second Military Region, said the action had enabled the Cambodians to discover the positions of the Viet Cong.

Since Prince Norodom Sihanouk was deposed March 18 by Gen. Lon Nol, there have been three reported mass killings of Vietnamese living in Cambodia.

Tuesday night, the government criticized the foreign press for reporting the massacre of Vietnamese while ignoring atrocities by the Viet Cong, which it said have killed or abducted 3,554 Cambodians since March 18.

Ostler Lifts Impaired Charges

Law is not law when it is a nullity and with this in mind Judge William Ostler quashed two charges of impaired driving in Victoria Provincial Court on Tuesday.

Ostler erased the charges of impaired driving and refusing to submit to a breathalyzer test against Keith T. L. Webb, 32, of 2214 Florence, and Wayne Roberts, 30, of 9633 8th Street, Sidney, by using the landmark decision of B.C. Supreme Court Justice Craig Munroe April 2.

Munroe ruled in a Vancouver appeal case that the federal driving (over .08 per cent blood alcohol content) law with its compulsory breath-test corollary was invalid because it had been improperly proclaimed.

The Supreme Court of Canada has set May 19 as the date for hearing argument on the question of the federal government's drinking-driving legislation that went into effect Dec. 1 last year.

CHARGED BEFORE

Lawyer Dermod Owen-Flood appeared before Ostler as counsel for both Webb and Roberts each who had been charged with the offences in February before the Munroe decision.

Owen-Flood argued that all charges should be quashed because the coupling of the breath-test offence, now invalid, with the impaired driving offence affected the outcome of the trial.

The Criminal Code section dealing with drinking-driving offences includes an impaired driving charge identically worded to the old section of the code before the new legislation in December but differently numbered.

Owen-Flood said the conduct of Webb's trial in March was based on what the accused said and did concerning the breathalyzer test when he was arrested.

Ostler agreed the trial could have been misleading because the breath-test law was "as it appeared to be" at the time.

NO OPPOSITION

Lawyer Lloyd McKenzie, appearing for the attorney-general's department, said his instructions were not to oppose Owen-Flood's bid.

Prosecutor Peter Birkett asked for an adjournment of both cases until there had been a ruling by the Supreme Court of Canada on the Munroe decision or for a court judgment using the old impaired driving section of the code before the December legislation.

Ostler refused adjournment and quashed all charges against Webb and Roberts, commenting that they had been infected with the "malady of nullity."

Manson Fan Sentenced To Death

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The first member of the "Manson family" to be tried for what the state charges was the opener of eight murders masterminded by the hippie cult leader was ordered Tuesday to die in the gas chamber.

A jury took only two hours and 45 minutes to bring in a death penalty verdict for Robert Beausoleil, 22, one of the weird assemblage of young men and women 35-year-old Charles Manson attracted to a sex and drugs commune at an old movie lot outside Los Angeles.

The same jury of seven women and five men Monday had found the babyfaced Beausoleil guilty of first degree murder in the torture slaying of Gary Hinman, a 34-year-old bagpipe musician who once befriended Manson.

Hinman was stabbed to death in his Topanga Canyon home on July 26, 1969. On Aug. 10, actress Sharon Tate and four others were knifed or shot to death at her estate. The next night wealthy grocer Leno Labianca and his wife were killed at their home.

Manson, three of his female followers and another young man are scheduled to go to trial June 15 for the Tate-Labianca slayings.

Matching Key to Parts Pool

LEYDEN (Reuters) — Tissue matching by computer at the world's biggest surgical spare parts pool in this Netherlands city is playing a big role in the success of kidney transplants.

Negative attitudes toward transplants have arisen mostly because of poor results with heart transplants, says Dr. J. J. Van Rood, a Dutch expert in tissue matching. Kidney transplants have been more successful.

Some kidneys transplanted 10 years ago between close relatives, such as brother and sister, are still functioning, Van Rood said. Through tissue matching, it has been possible to widen the circle for transplants.

Van Rood was describing the success of Eurotransplant, a European centre which supplies organs for people needing transplants.

Eurotransplant, with headquarters here, will be two years old in May. There now are 15 kidney centres in The Netherlands, Belgium and West Germany, and negotiations are going on with Switzerland. There are similar organizations in the Scandinavian countries and Britain.

So far, more than 1,000 patients have been classified by Eurotransplant according to tissue pattern, an essential element in reducing rejection symptoms. More than 500 patients, now being kept alive by artificial kidneys, are waiting for transplants, Dr. Van Rood said.

Man Admits Sword Attack

Gursharn S. Mann, 28, of Vancouver, described as an Okalla prison guard with a master's degree in political science, was charged with assault causing bodily harm and theft over $50.

A charge of attempted murder was dropped by the Crown after Mann pleaded guilty to assaulting Ragbier S. Bhandar and his wife of 271 Nicola in an Esquimalt parking lot.

Constable Robert Vining of Esquimalt testified he learned Mann had been asked to leave a dance at the Dominion Hall after twice being refused a dance by Mrs. Bhandar.

He had been admitted to the dance when he said he was an agent of the attorney-general's department investigating East Indian dances.

Mann went to the temple, Vining said, stole the sword during a worship service, returned to the hall and attacked the Bhandars as they left. Mrs. Bhandar was cut on the arm, her husband on the thumb. Mann was remanded to April 30 for presentence psychiatric reports.

Escaper Shot Dead By Police

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 31-year-old escaper from the British Columbia Penitentiary was killed in a gun battle with police Tuesday night in the city's east-end.

The man, identified by police as Murray Allan Boyd, who was serving a five-year sentence for theft at the time of his escape, was dead on arrival at hospital after exchanging shots with police near a community centre.

Acting on a tip, an RCMP officer and two city police detectives had moved into the area in an unmarked car.

When the man spotted the car, he jumped into a pickup truck, rammed the cruiser and opened fire with a pistol.

An unidentified 18-year-old girl in the truck escaped injury, but was later treated for shock.

Flower Shows Have Great Value

By HILDA BEASTALL

Twenty-five years is a long time for a community group to organize and produce a flower show annually, yet this has been the achievement of many local groups. This week Cadboro Bay reaches its 25th anniversary of spring flower shows, all held in the Parish Hall of St. George's Church just off May nard Road.

Hilda

Saturday is the date, and the show will be open from 2 until 8:30. A pleasant feature of many community shows is afternoon tea, encouraging visitors from other areas to spend the whole afternoon in an environment which may be new to them.

The ladies of St. George's have this planned for Saturday. Admission to the show includes tea, until 5.

Horticultural value of these spring shows is in bringing to the notice of gardeners the kinds of spring plants they may have overlooked when buying for their own gardens.

Not all the flowers of spring can be displayed in plant sections of city stores, yet in a dormant state as bulbs, corms or roots, they may be offered without success during fall planting time.

New gardeners are likely to be unfamiliar with a great many plant names. Iris for instance to some of us means only the tall bearded beauties flowering in June. The dozen or so other types with their varieties are quite unknown until seen in bloom with names attached at the various spring shows.

Another genus of plants not nearly well enough known and appreciated for their garden value is the anemone. Within the genus are species loving full sunshine, for gaiety in our spring gardens. Other species prefer dappled sun and shade in thin woodland. All are wind pollinated hence their name, anemone—windflower.

Even the show classes for polyanthus, primulas and wallflowers may reveal surprises for some of us. Each year new hybrids appear, bringing new colors to include in our garden picture painting.

The classes for flowering shrubs and trees is always one to intrigue. So many shrubs other than forsythia and lilac, bloom in April and early May that one looks hopefully for them to appear each year, but again they are not too commonly seen in shows. The two spring blooming buddleias, the pearl-like flowers of exochorda, sprng daphnes just coming into flower, and the early flowering deciduous viburnums, all will be candidates this spring for the flowering shrub classes at the shows.

So you and I and a lot of other gardeners will be going out to Cadboro Bay to see "what's on" at St. George's Parish Hall.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED L. KARPIN

Today's deal occurred in a recent National Championship event. The bidding was typical of the aggressive-type bidding that is characteristic of match-point duplicate bridge. The final contract, although not an appealing one, would nevertheless have been fulfilled had the East defender not come up with an imaginative play.

North-South vulnerable. North deals.

2 ♡	Pass	Pass	3 ♣
3 ◇	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ace of ♣.

After winning the opening club lead, West continued with the 10 of clubs to East's king. East then led a third club, which was ruffed in dummy. A trump was next led to South's ace, after which declarer played his remaining club and ruffed it with the board's last trump.

Had East ruffed this trick with the jack of hearts, declarer would have made his contract. In this case, East, after cashing his king of trumps, would have been compelled to lead either a spade or a diamond. With a spade lead, dummy's jack of spades would become a winner; and with a diamond lead, declarer would avoid the loss of a diamond trick.

But East did not ruff with the heart jack. Instead, he ruffed the fourth club lead with his king! He then led the heart jack, which West took with the queen. When West now led the diamond jack, dummy's queen was finessed. East's king then took the setting trick.

Actually, when South ruffed his fourth club, East could have discarded a diamond instead of trumping. Had he done this, declarer would have returned to his own hand via a spade lead, dummy's jack of spades would become a winner; and with a diamond lead, declarer would avoid the loss of a diamond trick.

Nevertheless, from East's position, the "squandering" of the heart king didn't figure to be a losing play. If South had the heart queen, he could always return to his own hand via the spade ace. A trump lead would then force East to win the trick—and East would be compelled to lead either a spade or a diamond, to give declarer his ninth trick.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Troops Stand Firm Under Gas Attack

By BOB BOWMAN

When the First World War began in August 1914 Canada performed a miracle of recruitment and training. The 1st Division of 33,000 men sailed from Quebec on October 3 and moved into the front line in Belgium in February, 1915. It is doubtful that any troops in history ever received a more dreadful baptism of fire. They were assigned to defend the city of Ypres which was the gateway to St. Omer, and the channel ports of Dunkirk, Calais, and Boulogne.

On April 22 the Canadians saw a dense cloud of yellowish-green vapor rolling toward them and their allies. It was poison gas moving slowly along the ground in heavy billows. French colonial troops were the first to be enveloped and they broke and fled, leaving a gap of more than a mile into which the Germans began to come through.

The Canadians were ordered to counter-attack and suffered heavy casualties clearing the Germans from St. Julien Wood. Crack Prussian troops then drove out the Canadians, and after six hours of fighting, for example, the 10th Battalion from Calgary had lost 619 men, killed or wounded. Commanding officer Colonel R. L. Boyle was among those killed.

The fighting continued back and forth, and on April 24 the Germans released more clouds of poison gas. This time the Canadians were in the thick of it. They were choked, blinded, and on the verge of losing the will to live, but they hung on. One measure of protecting themselves against some of the effects of the gas was to tie urine-soaked cloths over their noses.

The Canadians had another disadvantage. They were equipped with Ross rifles which often jammed. Ralph Allen wrote in "Ordeal by Fire": "Without warning hundreds of Canadian infantrymen found they could do nothing but weep, curse, or pray in the face of the advancing Germans and attempt to pry loose their jammed rifle bolts with trenching shovels or the heels of their big army boots."

The first battle of Ypres continued until May 4 but the 6,000, one-fifth of the entire force, were killed, wounded, or missing.

Other events on April 22:

1737 — La Compagnie des Forges began mining iron and built Canada's first smelter at Three Rivers, Quebec.

1786—Sir Guy Carleton, now Lord Dorchester, was made Governor of Canada.

Many Boxers Suffer Damage to Brain

By DR. WALTER ALVAREZ

Recently, in England, Dr. A. H. Roberts reported a study of the nervous systems of 224 professional boxers. Thirty-seven, or one in six, were markedly punch-drunk and showed signs of brain damage. Electroencephalograms (EEGs, or records of the tiny electric currents constantly running through the brain) were made on three-quarters of the men.

Those men who were most severely affected had a slurred speech which was almost unintelligible. They had a defective memory and slow thinking, and some looked as if they had Parkinson's disease, with a "mask-like" face which showed no sign of emotion. Others looked as if they might have multiple sclerosis (a disease in which many nerves are damaged).

There were no specific or diagnostic electroencephalographic signs, and no abnormal incidence of epilepsy. There was no evidence to prove that the boxing had contributed to the death of 16 of the ex-boxers who had died.

The prevalence of brain damage increased with the number of years in which the boxers had been fighting and being hit hard on the head. Although only the one in six of those examined were severely injured, there was an alarmingly high percentage of boxers who had less severe signs of brain injury.

I will never forget, many years ago, my shock at seeing Abe Atell, one of the world's greatest fighters, being led, blind, into the office of a doctor friend of mine. The doctor told me that Atell had been blinded, probably, by severe blows to his eyes. I have known another one of America's great fighters whose brain has obviously been terribly damaged by scores of terrible blows to the head.

As I have noted here before, a number of physicians have found that not only does LSD increase the risk of abortion, but the risk is higher when the woman is taking the drug than when the man is. When only the man is taking it, the wife has no extra tendency to abortions.

Now I read that Drs. W. McGlothlin, R. S. Sparkes and D. O. Arnold of California, who have made the largest study so far on LSD's effects on pregnancies, have found in a study of 148 pregnancies, that when the fathers were the LSD users, the abortion risk was 8 per cent, but when the mother or both parents were on the drug, the incidence of spontaneous abortion went up to 32 per cent.

One woman on LSD had five spontaneous abortions. It may well be that she was fortunate, because several studies have shown that the chromosomes (those 46 microscopic rods which, with the enclosed genes, determine what the child will be) may be injured by LSD. Since the doctors found abnormalities in some of the chromosomes of the dead fetuses, it may be that the child was going to be so deformed that it was lucky that he did not live.

I read that the number of diabetics now in the world is estimated at 30,000,000; this means that the incidence of diabetes has doubled since 1950. More than one-fourth of our population is believed to carry the tendency. As the authorities say, the number of diabetics is probably going to increase pretty rapidly, and anyone as old as I am can understand why.

In 1912, when in San Francisco I was working with our ablest local expert on diabetes, before we had insulin, I watched all of the children and all of the young people who came to us with diabetes die. Practically all of the diabetic women when pregnant miscarried; a few of them died, and some bore a dead child.

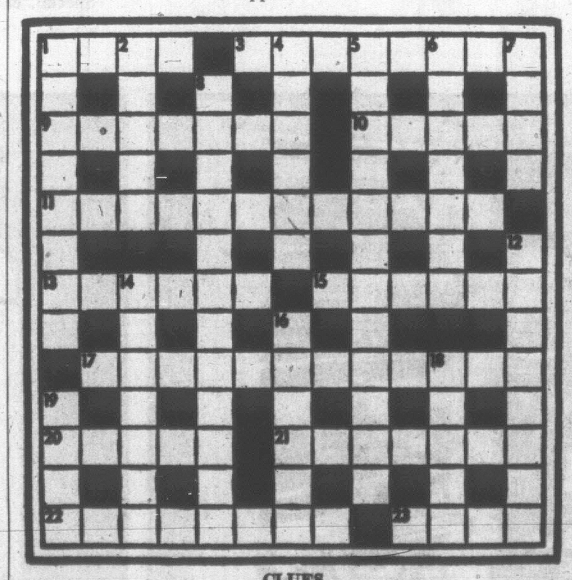

Today the pregnant diabetic woman, the fetus in her womb, and the child who becomes diabetic, can usually be kept alive and healthy.

Meeting Asks Hydro to Go Underground

But Officials Still Say No

By ROGER STONEBANKS

Just under 100 persons voted Tuesday night to ask B.C. Hydro to put a controversial high-voltage transmission line underground.

The underground part would extend from a point just west of Munn Road, south of Prospect Lake in Saanich, to Goward substation on Interurban Road and then south to Burnside and Douglas.

An earlier motion to put the high-voltage line underground from a point west of Goldstream into Victoria was defeated after a number of people said this was being ridiculous.

But Hydro officials at the meeting indicated plans will not be changed and the overhead wire will go ahead.

The three-hour meeting at St. Joseph's Parish Hall was arranged by Pat Codyre, 69, of 1890 Munn, spokesman for five householders who may be forced to move because of extra lines.

Several Hydro officials attended which attracted more than 100 persons at the start.

Codyre acted as meeting chairman and chief speaker against B.C. Hydro's plans. Toward the end, the meeting almost fell apart as emotion replaced reasons.

A motion was made to put the whole line underground from Goldstream into Victoria, and ran into stiff fire from some people, providing a criss-cross of exchanges among the audience while the Hydro officials sat back and watched.

CODYRE
. . . sparks vote

One speaker said "we can't be as selfish as we are. What is the cost? These are times of heavy inflation, interest is up, B.C. Hydro has a limit on how much it can spend, Hydro has to provide adequate power at reasonable cost."

Someone proposed an amendment (contrary to the motion) to reduce the length of underground to a point west of Munn Road and along to Interurban, down that street and Burnside to a substation behind the Ingraham Hotel on Douglas.

Some people complained they couldn't hear properly because of poor acoustics others began leaving the meeting and one person was heard to ask "what are we voting on?"

When the motion was defeated, chairman Codyre said he would consider the earlier amendment. A member of the audience pointed out this is incorrect procedure, to consider an amendment after a motion had been dealt with.

After more discussion and a criss-cross of debate, the amendment was changed to a separate motion and finally passed. The meeting ended shortly after that.

PAY EXTRA?

High spot came when one man said he is prepared to pay an extra $10 or $20 a month to "protect the environment from a festoon of electrical lines." He recieved the loudest applause of the evening.

"You are prepared to pay more?" asked C. W. Nash, load development manager for the crown corporation.

"Yes, yes," shouted many people in the audience.

Nash went on to say that underground wiring is quite practical in residential subdivisions because of low voltages, but not high-voltage lines over long distances.

It cannot be afforded at the present time because of cost and the time factor in meeting the 10 per cent per year growth in power demand in Greater Victoria, he said.

Nash said one of the new transmission lines has to be in service by 1971 and the others as load grows.

$30,000 A MILE

For a 138,000-volt line, in round figures, overhead costs $30,000 a mile and underground under normal conditions is $300,000 to $400,000 and if there is a great deal of rock, up to $500,000 a mile.

The meeting was told that there will be two circuits coming from Jordan River and two from Duncan. Two of them would be 138,000 volts and two 230,000 volts.

Nash said he would not discuss details of the Munn Road problems at a public meeting because it is a private matter with the people affected.

Any offer would be a fair one, he said, but no figure has been mentioned yet.

He also said an extra 400 feet is needed in this area to accommodate the extra lines.

Nash was asked directly: Are they staying or are they going?

'PARTLY YES, NO'

"Partly yes and partly no," he repleid.

"He'll talk all night and not say a word," snapped Codyre.

Nash said this would involve four turns, compound the cost several times and use more land.

Another questioner asked if 67 to 69 acres to the north on the Pemberton property is being held for "further development."

He said moving the line on to this property would be better than knocking down homes and "someone is protecting Pemberton."

One questioner said he had been informed the cost of generating the needed extra power for Greater Victoria is roughly $30 million, so the difference between underground and overhead along only 3 per cent of the total.

Nash said if this was done, B.C Hydro would be called on to put more lines underground all over the province so the cost would be compounded and become "astronomical."

'WON'T SELL'

Codyre told the meeting in his opening statement that Munn Road resident have no intention of selling. Some of them had lived there 23 years.

He said the overhead line could be placed underground for less than a mile to avoid displacing the houses, could be put on an existing easement behind the homes or use a slice of Francis Park.

"The fate of these homes was decided two years ago but they didn't come near me to tell me," he said. "This is the way this operation works —there's nothing official and when there is you're dead."

He also said the cost of getting the people out of their homes would be more than putting the line underground in this section.

But Nash, asked later in the meeting if it is cheaper to put the line underground in the Munn Road area, said "no."

E. S. Collins, B.C Hydro's manager of land development, explained purchase procedures.

Hydro employed an appraiser to formulate its offer, the owner could do the same for his counter offer, and if it was not resolved by negotiation it would be settled by arbitration before a judge.

$214,000 Plan Approved For Monterey Addition

The provincial treasury board announced Tuesday $214,000 has been approved for spending at Monterey Elementary.

The Greater Victoria school board will be allowed to call tenders for five new classrooms plus heating, electrical and fire alarm renovations.

Since February, Monterey PTA, Oak Bay council and the board have pressed for overdue improvements at Monterey.

But Phillipson later met at Monterey with district superintendent Jake Longmore and Trustee Peter Bunn, and Phillipson later said the school board proposal seemed fair. He promised to recommend it to the treasury board.

Result of that recommendation was the Tuesday announcement.

Bunn, chairman of the board's library buildings and grounds committee, said two of the classroom allocations would be used to build a new school library.

The board will press for permission to build a new auditorium, convert the old auditorium into a library, and put the new library rooms back into service as classrooms.

Oak Bay MLA Scott Wallace said today he hoped the general public would recognize that the government does respond to parent concern.

HARSH COMMENTS

"Many, I felt, harsh comments suggested the government was indifferent to Monterey," Wallace said.

Largest project on the list was construction of 24 classrooms at Alberni district's new Mount Klitsa junior secondary, due to open next September. Cost of the second stage construction is $714,000.

SOOKE AREA

Red Baron Downed by Canadian

Violating his own dictum, he let an enemy fighter plane get behind and above him. It was carelessness born of hunger for yet another kill.

When Manfred von Richthofen climbed into his all-red German Fokker triplane that day, he already was a legend. With 80 confirmed kills, the Red Baron, so named because of the distinctive color of his plane, would go down as the leading ace of the First World War.

He was after kill No. 81, a Canadian flying low over British lines, when another Canadian, Capt. A. Roy Brown, of Carleton Place, Ont., did him in. He was 25. The date: April 21, 1918, in the last year of the war.

For the anniversary a large wreath will appear at his grave in Berlin. Von Richthofen's memory is celebrated by flowers sent anonymously to the Invaliden Street Cemetery in East Berlin.

Saanich Business Tax Proposed

Saanich council will be asked next month to approve a business tax in the municipality.

The business tax study committee, at a meeting Tuesday, also recommended that council appoint a committee to study licence fees with an increase indicated by discussion.

The Saanich Chamber of Commerce said it realizes licence fees in the municipality are lower than elsewhere, and suggested the extra revenue generated by a business tax would be more fairly distributed by increases in licence fees.

But licence inspector Roy Wootten said the main purpose of licensing is to give a municipality some control, not as a means of revenue. And the licence fee would be a credit against any business tax.

EXTRA LOAD

Chamber president John Hicks said the extra load would be better spread among the 2,700 holders of business licences rather than a tax on 500 businesses.

He also said the Municipal Act doesn't provide for exemptions. However, the meeting was told by Comprfoller-Treasure John Tribe that there are practical rather than legal exemptions, where the revenue from a licence would be higher than anything that could be realized from a tax.

Hicks said there are no exemptions under the act and can be no exemptions and said "more homework" should be done by the municipality.

Wootten said Hicks had "misconstrued everything I said, misused everything I said to him and I'll bear this in mind in the future. I gave you information on licence fees."

Hicks replied that he asked on the basis of a business tax. Wootten said contractors, for example, pay a minimum $30 business licence fee which goes up according to the number of employees.

The rental value of a house office at $300 a year would generate only $18 at a 6 per cent rate.

Wootten said he knows there is no provision for exemptions in the Act, but it was simply good business to make exemptions because they are strictly a loss.

He also said that the rough revenue from a 6 per cent business tax would be $45,000 to $50,000 a year at first, with an administrative cost factor of about $10,000. This would be for part-time work for one appraiser and an office girl.

PERCENTAGE AMOUNT

The amount of the business tax was not mentioned in the committee's recommendation and will be determined by council.

The Muncipal Act permits municipalities to impose an annual tax on every person carrying on a business in a designated percentage amount, not exceeding 10 per cent per year of the annual rental value of the property.

The fair rental would have to be established, something like assessments on property, and could be appealed to a court of revision, also like assessments.

The tax, if approved, could not be imposed until next year.

Troops Land In Trinidad

Attempt To Quell Mutiny

Times News Services

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad — British Commonwealth troops from neighboring islands landed today to help the Trinidad government put down a mutiny which threatened this capital city.

The 200 army mutineers seized the Chaguaramas army base in support of the black power movement and the rebels were reported to be moving on the capital.

Two days of street rioting and fighting on Chaguaramas Peninsula, 12 miles from Port of Spain, have left five persons dead.

Two women were wounded today in separate outbreaks of shooting in downtown Port of Spain where a state of seige has been declared.

SMALL ARMS

The United States agreed today to fly small arms to Trinidad to help the government deal with the mutiny and also ordered its Caribbean task force to sail for the port to evacuate Americans if necessary.

Washington is reported to have 2,000 marines stationed on the helicopter carrier Guadalcanal which is heading towards Trinidad.

U.S. PLANE TOLL SOARS IN VIETNAM

SAIGON (AP) — The U.S. command announced today the loss of four American planes over the lower panhandle of Laos and three helicopters in South Vietnam. It was one of the highest aircraft tolls reported at one time in the war.

The command said one American was killed, three are missing and three were injured in the crashes.

A total of 6,683 U.S. planes and helicopters worth more than $6,000,000,000 now have been reported lost in the war.

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — President Nixon has signed a water quality improvement act which provides "the first comprehensive method" for dealing with oil spills from vessels even beyond the U.S. three-mile territorial sea.

The act deals with the contiguous zone, generally defined as 12 miles out to sea, and differs in that fact from Canada's proposed Arctic pollution bill which specifies control over seas up to 100 miles from land.

The U.S. has rejected the Canadian proposal, which would also extend territorial waters to the limit of 12 miles from the present three.

The spokesman said the act is considered to be within the laws already established by the 1956 Geneva convention on the territorial sea and contiguous zone and the 1954 agreement on the prevention of pollution of the sea by oil.

Victorians Take Action On High Cost of Dying

By JACK SCOTT

Victorians are seizing the opportunity to hold the line on the high cost of dying.

Membership in the local branch of the Memorial Society of British Columbia, a non-profit organization providing simple, no-frills funerals at a basic price of $125, has shown an unprecedented growth in the first quarter of 1970.

Directors of the society here say that enrolment in the 14-year-old organization took a spectacular rise with reports of a major take-over of British Columbia undertaking establishments and cemeteries by a United States-based company.

APPROACHES

Approaches have been made to at least two Victoria firms by Service Corporation International, of Houston, Texas, following their purchase of leading mortuaries and cemeteries in the Vancouver area.

The take-over there was criticized in the legislature by West Vancouver Liberal MLA Allan Williams who charged complicity with the government and Attorney-General Leslie Peterson in a scheme "to make profit out of bereavement."

It prompted a call from Herb Capozzi, Social Credit member for Vancouver Centre, for a complete investigation into the high cost of funerals.

Meantime, the Memorial Society, founded originally by members of the Unitarian Church, has completed arrangements to price its services to Vancouver Island members at the mainland level.

OFFICE, MORGUE

Premises in Victoria at 632 John Street have been refurbished to provide an office and morgue. A full-time undertaker represents the North Vancouver firm of First Memorial Services Ltd., a private company associated with the society since 1961. A non-denominational chapel for memorial servies is in the planning stage.

While the original aim of the society was "to provide service which will ease the emotional and financial burdens of final arrangements and preserve in memory the life rather than the death of the deceased" the cost factor has clearly played an increasing role in boosting membership.

MEMBERS UP

Society directors say that in the past three years enrolment in British Columbia has doubled to 30,000 members. Membership in Greater Victoria has increased from 1,800 in 1968 to more than 3,000 today.

"The growth rate has been so rapid in the first three months of this year that we can't keep our statistics up to date," said Mrs. Joan Bennett, secretary of the Victoria branch.

For the directors here the increase in membership means a long-awaited breakthrough to public acceptance of the concept that, if you've got to go, the way to go is with simplicity, a minimum of ritual and a price structure that's removed from emotion, status and "slumber-room salesmanship."

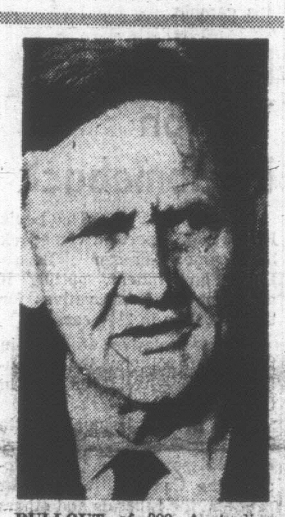

LARGEST HERE

From its original 55 Vancouver Unitarians the British Columbia branch has become the largest of its kind become the largest of its kind in Canada, second in North America only to the original Seattle society established in 1939.

David J. Murphy, recently appointed Vancouver Island manager of the society's undertaking firm, reports that some 100 funerals are conducted each month in Vancouver and an average of 12 a month in Victoria.

While the procedure of services is left to the discre-

Quebec Labor Unites Against Federal Stand

By IAN PORTER

OTTAWA (CP) — Organized labor in Quebec put aside internal differences Tuesday night to mass on Parliament Hill the biggest demonstration yet against the federal government's role in the Montreal postal dispute.

Represented among an estimated 1,500 demonstrators were the Quebec Federation of Labor and the rival Confederation of National Trade Unions. Placards in the crowd proclaimed the presence of the Council of Postal Unions, affiliated with the QFL.

QFL general secretary Fernand Daoust said the rival organizations have come together in a common front to support Montreal's unemployed mail-truck drivers in their three-month fight with the government. The drivers, ex-employees of formal postal contractor G. Lapalme Inc., are affiliated through their union with the CNTU.

Mr. Daoust said there are no grounds for conflict between the QFL and the CNTU in the issue. The QFL, he said, supported the drivers' demand that they be permitted to work for the post office as a bargaining unit separate from the existing postal unions.

OFFER 'HUMILIATING'

He said the government had offered unacceptable, "humiliating," terms in negotiations with the union over possible post office employment for the men.

"We hope this demonstration will show the government the determination of Quebec workers to get this whole thing settled," he said.

The demonstration was without serious incident.

Colombian Army Holds Ex-Dictator

(Times News Services)

BOGOTA, Colombia — Colombian army troops surrounded the home of former dictator Gustavo Rojas Pinilla today, placing him under unofficial house arrest while his supporters called for his return to power.

The government declared a state of seige, equivalent to martial law, Tuesday night after the second day of increasing rioting since Rojas' apparent defeat in Sunday's presidential elections.

The civil registrar's office reported that after tabulation of 98 per cent of the votes, Rojas was trailing by nearly 50,000 votes, with 1,570,249 counted for the candidate of the governing National Front, Misael Pastrana Borrero, and 1,521,267 for the former military strongman.

Cambodia's Aid Plea Lodged With UN

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Cambodia lodged an urgent appeal through the United Nations today for aid in combatting North Vietnamese and Viet Cong invaders.

In a letter circulated as a UN Security Council document, Ambassador Khim Tit asserted his country can never "bow to the law of the jungle" and is determined to protect its independence and territorial integrity.

"For this reason," he added, "it addresses an urgent appeal to all countries which love peace and justice to provide the assistance it needs to combat these forces of foreign aggression which are violating the sovereignty of its national patrimony and all international law."

U.S. President Richard Nixon is reported considering an urgent plea for weapons and other materials made last week by the new Cambodian regime, but Washington sources believe it has placed him in a delicate diplomatic and political situation.

He has taken a position against widening U.S. involvement in Southeast Asia, and is under congressional pressure to adhere to this policy, even though the Cambodian request was not for troop support.

Military spokesmen in the Cambodian capital today said North Vietnamese troops and Viet Cong guerrillas have launched a major assault against the provincial capital of Takeo, 50 miles from Phnom Penh, and government units have been withdrawn from the town.

Thieu Seeks More Aid

SAIGON (WP) — Commenting on the new timetable for U.S. withdrawals from Vietnam, President Nguyen Van Thieu said Tuesday night that he hoped "allied nations" — presumably the United States — would now provide "more satisfactory aid in every field" to help the Vietnamese protect themselves.

Thieu said his government had agreed to a further withdrawal of 150,000 U.S. troops during the next year, as outlined by President Nixon in a televised speech Monday night.

But he then quickly added that his government needed more aid. And he warned "free nations in the world" that permanent peace in Vietnam and Southeast Asia "will depend on the strength and determination of nations threatened by the Communists."

AN AMERICAN VIEWPOINT:

By ROBERT ESTABROOK
The Washington Post

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.— Many diplomats concerned with environment questions believe that the United States has a strong legal case in its Arctic waters dispute with Canada but is nevertheless likely to lose the argument in terms of world opinion.

Canada acted earlier this month to assert a right to control pollution in a zone extending 100 miles out from its Arctic islands and also to claim a new 12-mile limit for national sovereignty. Although the U.S. asserted that it would not recognize either claim, these unilateral moves have occasioned nowhere near the international outcry they might have brought at another time.

One reason is that "environment" has suddenly become a magic phrase. To criticize so obviously popular an effort as pollution control would be like opposing progress or endorsing sin.

Another reason is that for their own individual purposes a number of countries want to see a change in the present three-mile limit on national sovereignty as recognized in international law.

Some nine Latin American countries, including Brazil, Argentina and Peru, have asserted national jurisdiction extending out 200 miles and see support of their claims in the Canadian effort. Certain Arab countries are said to have mentioned the possibility of hemming in Israel.

Diplomats note that the United States itself supported an extension of national sovereignty to six miles with an additional six-mile exclusive fishing zone at an international conference in 1960.

12-MILE LIMIT

The change failed of adoption by one vote, but nearly 60 countries now claim a 12-mile limit. Recently the state department called for a new effort to agree on a 12-mile zone.

A few larger countries agree with the U.S. contention that existing international law must be respected until it is changed. They also share the Amercian fears that the Canadian effort may encourage such countries as Indonesia and the Philippines to press claims that straits between islands in their archipelagoes constitute national waters.

Some analysts also point out that, whatever the justification for prevention of pollution in the Arctic, the Canadian move is not wholly altruistic in other respects. Extension of territorial waters to 12 miles off Newfoundland and British Columbia and a claim of the entire Bay of Funday, for example, would benefit Canadian fishermen at the expense of others.

LAW CLOUDY

Even with misgivings on such points, however, many authorities here acknowledge that existing international law is cloudy on such problems as pollution. It was written to protect the rights of navies and shipping concerns, not the environment.

Parochial Schools Perishing

Students Dwindling And Costs Climbing

An Analysis

Rising costs and shrinking enrolments continue to put more parochial schools in B.C. out of operation each year.

In February, parishioners who send their children to Sacred Heart Elementary on McKenzie Avenue decided it would be financially impossible to continue operating the school, and announced it would not re-open next September.

Enrolment at the school has declined from 280 to 110 in the last 10 years.

In Kamloops last month members of Sacred Heart Parish voted 72 per cent in favor of terminating secondary classes at co-educational St. Ann's Academy.

The problem again was financial, and the solution will involve dumping 233 secondary students into Kamloops public schools next September.

The precarious financial state of local parochial schools came dramatically to light in 1968 with the hotly-debated decision to close the 104-year-old St. Louis College.

Bishop Remi de Roo said then:

"The problem is not could we save enough to save St. Louis. The problem is, are we going to rally fast enough to save the rest of the schools?"

Since then Sacred Heart has gone under, while elementary classes at St. Ann's Academy on Humboldt — the oldest non-public school in B.C. — are being phased out one grade a year in anticipation of expansion of St. Joseph's Hospital.

The future of the high school adjacent to the academy is still up in the air, depending on hospital plans.

That leaves three other elementary schools — St. Josephs, St. Patrick's and St. Andrew's (formerly St. Louis College) — still operating in the area.

Msgr. Michael O'Connell last week discussed some of the reasons behind closing of parochial schools.

"There's an opinion I do have," O'Connell said. "It's that we've been priced out of education."

He estimated that sometime "far in the future" parochial school education would be offered only to children from affluent families.

Even now it's more difficult for people of "average means" to pay tuition fees than it was 20 and 30 years ago, O'Connell said.

In the past, the low-cost labor of teaching nuns enabled Catholic schools to operate with modest tuition fees. But in recent years there has been a sharp drop in the number of nuns available for teaching duty.

As a result Catholic schools have had to hire more and more lay teachers. In 1968-69 lay teachers outnumbered nuns for the first time in parochial schools in the United States.

Since lay teachers cost four to six times as much as nuns, the cost of staffing some schools has soared. And tuition fees have been raised to keep up with salaries.

A spokesman for the Sacred Heart school board who did not wish to be identified said the decision to not re-open in September was the indirect result of the intention of three nuns on staff to leave their order in June.

The spokesman said the board would have had to hire three more lay teachers and in the process would have had to boost basic fees from $25 to $40 per family.

The Sacred Heart spokesman said having three highly qualified sisters on staff enabled the school to get by with less-qualified — cheaper — lay teachers, who as a rule get jobs in parochial schools while awaiting an opening in the public system.

But there are other factors besides the financial squeeze, said Msgr. O'Connell. There has been a steady decline in enrolments in recent years as parents withdraw their children from parochial schools.

"I think the Catholic people are still very concerned about religious training for their children," said O'Connell, "but it's like any other situation: you have to weigh your priorities."

Some parents decided their children would be better off at public schools which are often better-equipped than parochial schools. These same parents are shouldering the burden of their children's religious indoctrination.

"Parents generally speaking feel a greater sense of responsibility for the religious education of their children than formerly, and a lot of these parents have been assuming that responsibility in the home."

O'Connell said the attraction of parochial school education sometimes depends on whether children are taught by a nun or by a lay teacher.

"So if you're having a tough time financially and there's no sister, that's just one more motivation to send your children to public schools."

Gordon Hall of the St. Andrew's school board said the school has two nuns and six lay teachers on the staff.

Hall said school operating costs are paid for by fees and an annual $20,000 subsidy from the parish of St. Andrew's. The school anticipates a slight boost in enrolment with the closing of Sacred Heart.

The big question for public school boards is how to accommodate students from parochial schools that close on short notice.

At Kamloops last month it was learned local secondary schools could absorb 233 students from St. Ann's Academy, but trustees decided to ask the provincial government to start supporting independent schools anyway.

In Victoria last week trustee Peter Bunn, chairman of the Greater Victoria board's building and grounds committee, said the board is looking into the possibility of setting up a portable school on Rogers Road for an estimated 60 to 70 youngsters from Sacred Heart.

Portable classrooms would be brought from Fairburn elementary in Gordon Head. The board has rejected an offer to take over Sacred Heart for a $1,000 monthly rent.

It looks like large numbers of students will continue to leave parochial schools to enroll in public schools for years to come.

In the United States the National Catholic Education Association estimated 4.9 million students enrolled at Catholic elementary and secondary schools last September. That compares with 5,033,000 during 1968-69 and 5,255,000 the year before.

Catholic leaders say the only hope for bailing out the parochial system is through federal and state grants.

Closer to home they point out the only two provincial governments which do not recognize separate schools are those of B.C. and Manitoba.

'We've Been Priced Out of Education'

Low Income Families Get Rent Break

Tenants of Blanshard Court and other public housing projects in Canada—especialy working mothers and larger families—will get a better break through new rental scales announced Tuesday in Ottawa.

Municipal housing officials were enthusiastic, but at the provincial level officials said there had been no discussion of the change prior to the announcement by Robert Andras, the minister responsible for housing.

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell commented:

"One thing is certain. Greater subsidies will mean a greater difficit to be picked up by the taxpayers. We don't know how the plan is going to be implemented or how the deficit costs will be shared."

His views were echoed by J. Everett Brown, chairman of the B..C Housing Management Commission.

Under the present cost-sharing scheme, which has been in effect since the Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. introduced it in the 1950s, cities or municipalities have picked up 12½ per cent of the deficit, a similar amount has been paid by provincial governments, and the remainder by the federal government.

LONG OVERDUE

"This has been long overdue. Tenants in public housing have been stuck with fixed income ceilings that have become outdated since the scale was first set in the early 50s."

The revised rent scheme would:

—Reduce from 30 to 25 per cent the maximum proportion of a tenant's income to be paid in rent;

—Lower the minimum proportion for tenants at the bottom income level from 16.7 to 14.4 per cent;

—Reduce rents of large families by $2 a month for each child after the first two;

—Increase to $900 from $250 the amount a working mother may earn before her income starts counting as part of family income total used in figuring the rent;

—Allow one-parent families to deduct $900 from the annual income used to determine rent!

—Require tenants to declare income only once every two years.

Hooson said that tenants now have to declare incomes every month.

"When their income goes up this causes an abrupt dislocation when it's above the maximum allowed. It means they have to relocate within three months."

WORKING MOTHERS

He applauded the announcement's recognition of the necessity for working mothers.

"At long last the working mothers are going to get a break. Their expenses should be deductible. When a woman goes out to work, apart from baby sitters, there are expenses, such as bus fares, hair-dos and new clothes. She has to start gussying herself up a bit if she wants to hold on to her job."

In his announcement, Andras said that low-income families waiting to get into public housing units would also get a break. A total of 27,500 units were built in 1969. This would be upped to 35,000 in 1970.

Andras added that the total of the two years' program was equal to 75 per cent of all production in the past 20 years.

FINAL FAREWELLS were made to Vice-Admiral J. C. O'Brien today as he left HMC Dockyard after his last official visit as maritime commander. O'Brien hands over command to Rear-Admiral H. A. Porter July 7, before heading for Rome where he will become the first Canadian commandant of the NATO Defence Coliege.

Runaway Sparks Clash

The chairman of the Greater Victoria juvenile detention home committee charged today that Eric Martin Institute for psychiatric care refused to re-admit a 14-year-old runaway overnight.

The charge was immediately denied by institute administrator Clifford Brown.

Detention home committee chairman, Saanich Ald. William Noel, said the youth was brought to the juvenile detention home on Pembroke Street by police after being found wandering in an occupied house.

When they learned his name and background, "police contacted the Eric Martin Institute and they refused to accept the boy back as a patient because he was automatically discharged if not back by midnight."

Brown replied that the youth was a voluntary patient, and did leave the institute which in turn notified the attending doctor who recommended the police be contacted to pick him up.

Brown said there may have been a misunderstanding because if a patient leaves and isn't back by midnight, "for the purposes of paperwork he is marked as absent. It is not a question of not being allowed to be admitted."

He said the youth now is being cared for by his own doctor who is arranging for his further treatment.

Noel said the log at the juvenile detention home recording the incident states that the youth was brought there at 12:30 a.m. and refused to give his name and address, after being found in someone's home.

Later he gave his name, said he was a patient at EMI and ran away at 3 p.m. Tuesday.

The log states that a Victoria city police constable "contacted EMI and was advised that policy is that if a patient is not returned by midnight he is automatically discharged."

The youth's doctor was then phoned and he said the boy is a ward of the Catholic Children's Aid in Vancouver, but the juvenile detention home could find no such listing.

The Times was told this morning that the youth was charged in juvenile court with being unlawfully in someone's house, remanded at the juvenile detention home until Monday where he will have to be confined to a cell and locked up to keep him separate from other juveniles.

The Times was also told that the youth escaped from the Eric Martin Institute by cutting his way through a ceiling.

Brown confirmed this was the escape route, adding that some ceilings are "dropped" with suspended accoustic tile.

He emphasized that the youth was a voluntary patient at the hospital, not someone committed, so there is no authority to hold him against his will.

Co-Ordination For Home Care

By DON VIPOND

Six organizations in Greater Victoria have joined hands to co-ordinate home care services for the ill or incapacitated.

No new services will be provided initially but for the first time people who require more than one form of health assistance in thier home will have a central office available to organize servites.

The aim of home care services is to permit a patient to leave hospital earlier, give needed care to patients awaiting admission to hospital or nursing home and in some cases, provide enough help in the home to make admission to a hospital or nursing home unnecessary.

SAVE BEDS

"I'm convinced that if we have a good home care program we will be able to save some hospital beds," Dr. Andre Nyhof said Tuesday at a press conference detailing the new setup.

Groups which have worked together to establish the co-ordinating service include the Community Council of Greater Victoria, the Victorian Order of Nurses, Victoria Medical Society, Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health, Meals on Wheels and the Red Cross.

VON nurse Betty Short will staff the home care services office and Dr. Ruth Arnott of the health board's staff will act as consultant.

Home care services include bedside nursing, physiotherapy, occupational therapy, delivery of a hot meal daily and housekeeping assistance provided by Red Cross volunteers.

Bedside nursing may involve administering injections, bathing, changing dressings, instruction to family members on patient care or rehabilitation services.

50,000 VISITS

VON and health board nurses conducted about 50,000 home visits locally last year and the Red Cross about 1,200 home-making calls.

At this point the project isn't costing the taxpayer a dollar, said Garth Homer, executive director of the Community Council.

"We're going to experiment with an idea and see if it works."

The project is sound because it exploits to the maximum the services already established, he said.

An advisory committee will review progress and make recommendations after the program has been under way six months.

High Hazards Expected

Permits to start campfires and for land clearing and debris burning must be obtained as of May 1, the start of British Columbia's forest season, the B.C. Forest Service said today.

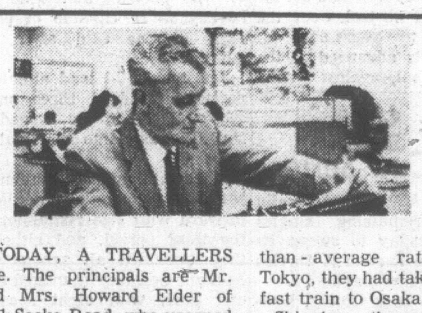

Campfire permits may be obtained from the Forest Service, Fish and Wildlife branch offices or sporting good stores.

Land burning permits are available from forest ranger and municipal offices.

Lorne F. Swannel, B.C.'s chief forester, said today fire hazards are expected to be high this spring and summer sue to last winter's comparatively light snowfall.

"We expect dry conditions," he said. "Already we are drawing up plans to increase our normal fire fighting personnel and equipment in the event of a dry season."

The air tanker (water bomber) fleet was also being expanded with the addition of three modified A-26 twin-engined aircraft, he said. They would operate initially from Prince George to protect large timber stands in northern B.C.

Arthur Mayse...

TODAY, A TRAVELLERS tale. The principals are Mr. and Mrs. Howard Elder of 5811 Sooke Road, who yearned to visit Japan and Expo 70, but wouldn't settle for the standard guided tour.

Their preparations began last fall when they enrolled in a Japanese conversation course on the Adult Education list.

Early this year, they put in for the required innoculation against smallpox. Since they would be pausing in Taiwan and Hong Kong, they followed advice and added anti-cholera shots.

Then, on March 1, they set out with their two children to discover Japan.

It was a good trip—so good that they hope to repeat it in some future year. Howard and Carol Elder told me about it on Tuesday afternoon in a living room that overlooks Sooke Harbor.

They had exchanged their Canadian funds in Tokyo airport at about 332 yen for a dollar, which was a better-than-average rate. From Tokyo, they had taken a super-fast train to Osaka.

Skipping the first bad-weather week of Expo 70, they had travelled the Inland Sea to sunny Kyushu, farthest south island of the archipelago. There they had seen orchards heavy with the little Japanese oranges that help make a Canadian Christmas.

At this point in what had begun as an orderly review of routes and stopovers, Howard pushed his map aside.

We could come back to it later. But right now, he would sooner remember the Mountie outside British Columbia's Expo pavilion whose most-used word is "Arimasen!"

The word, as he employs it, means, "This is forbidden." He speaks it politely, but firmly to successive Japanese who spot B.C.'s upswept tiers of Douglas fir logs and joyously climb as high as they can at risk of their necks to get their pictures taken.

Inside the pavilion, the Elders got a warm welcome from Pam Gillan and Elva Starr, B.C. hostesses who were among their classmates in the Victoria language course. The two are staying with a Japanese family, and though sometimes a little homesick, are enjoying their adventure.

How about Expo 70 itself? Does it compare favorably with the Montreal world's fair?

The friendly Japanese asked that question too, Howard told me. The answer: Expo 70 on its compact site, is much different but very good. Its theme, "Progress and Harmony for Mankind," is very well worked out.

However, the progress of a Japanese grandmother through the crowds lacks something of harmony.

"Those little old ladies have sharp elbows," Howard recalled, "and they use them. As it was explained to us, grandma is bossed by her father if he's alive, her husband, her son and her son-in-law. She wouldn't get anywhere if she didn't shove."

But it's good-natured pushing, and in a densely populated land, the hearty boost serves a useful purpose.

A tip here to Expo-bound Westerners who would escape the densest throngs. Avoid rush-hour journeys. And if you would shorten your wait in the lineups outside the most popular pavilions, take advantage of the fact that Japanese go home early. Use the hours from 6 to 9 p.m.

However, Carol and Howard Elder weren't out to avoid crowds. They mixed and they mingled. They put the Japanese they had learned in Victoria to use, and where communication failed, they tossed in English or sign language.

Their linguistic ventures were approved by a good-humored people who like to laugh.

"We made mistakes, of course," Howard said, "and sometimes we were funny without meaning to be. It was puzzling to hear students giggle when we mentioned to a group that many young Canadians rode Hondas. We meant motorcycles. To them, the word means 'monkey'."

The visitors from Sooke found they could rely on Japan Travel Bureau's foreign section for thoroughgoing and accurate advice about routes and accommodation.

Wherever their rovings took them, they found cleanliness, complete honesty, and hospitality that became warmer when they identified themselves as Canadians.

They also found a country of contrasts. The dark business suit and the mini spoke of westernization. But the occasional kimona told of an older Japan, and street shoes were still changed for slippers in the home doorway.

One Way to See Red!

A resident of Oregon wants Mayor Courtney Haddock to invite the Russian and Red Chinese fleets to Victoria for a visit.

Marsh F. Beall, 15515 SE Meadowlark Lane, Portland, in a letter to the mayor says he feels such an invitation would be the ideal way to protest nerve gas shipments through the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

Beall said he is sure Haddock is as aware of the U.S. Army's "public be damned" attitude as the residents of Oregon.

If the Russian and Chinese fleets were invited to Victoria, Beall suggests, they could steam through the strait "and look over U.S. installations on the way."

"I am sure the U.S. Army would pose an objection and then the city of Victoria could take the same sort of attitude taken by the U.S. in the nerve gas case."

Vietnamese Survivors Back in Camp

OUTSIDE SAANG (Reuters) — About 60 survivors of a group of Vietnamese civilians, ordered by Cambodian troops to march toward Viet Cong positions, were driven back to a detention centre Tuesday night after one-third of the group was killed or wounded in Viet Cong and Cambodian crossfire.

About 30 of the Vietnamese, including children, women and old men, were unaccounted for after they were caught in the crossfire near Saang, 18 miles from the capital of Phnom Penh.

The horrified civilians were ordered to march toward the Viet Cong, in what a local Cambodian commander described as "a very new experiment to appeal to the conscience of the other side."

No sign of any dead or dying could be seen Tuesday night from forward positions of the Cambodian army just outside the town, which was captured by the Viet Cong Sunday.

The Vietnamese were brought here on trucks at noon Tuesday. A loudspeaker broadcast the Cambodian troops' intentions to the Viet Cong, who were believed to be occupying a wrecked school and other buildings about 300 yards away.

GIVEN WHITE FLAG

The Cambodians gave leaflets to the Vietnamese appealing to the Communists to leave Cambodia, then ordered them to march toward the town under a white flag.

One eyewitness said a Viet Cong raised himself from cover and held up a hand in a halting gesture as the group of Vietnamese approached.

A shot was fired, and both sides opened up, with the civilians in the direct line of fire.

But, Brig.-Gen. Sosthene Fernandez, commander of Cambodia's Second Military Region, said the action had enabled the Cambodians to discover the positions of the Viet Cong.

Since Prince Norodom Sihanouk was deposed March 18 by Gen. Lon Nol, there have been three reported mass killings of Vietnamese living in Cambodia.

Tuesday night, the government criticized the foreign press for reporting the massacre of Vietnamese while ignoring atrocities by the Viet Cong, which it said have killed or abducted 3,554 Cambodians since March 18.

Ostler Lifts Impaired Charges

Law is not law when it is a nullity and with this in mind Judge William Ostler quashed two charges of impaired driving in Victoria Provincial Court on Tuesday.

Ostler erased the charges of impaired driving and refusing to submit to a breathalyzer test against Keith T. L. Webb, 32, of 2214 Florence, and Wayne Roberts, 30, of 9633 8th Street, Sidney, by using the landmark decision of B.C. Supreme Court Justice Craig Munroe April 2.

Munroe ruled in a Vancouver appeal case that the federal driving (over .08 per cent blood alcohol content) law with its compulsory breath-test corollary was invalid because it had been improperly proclaimed.

The Supreme Court of Canada has set May 19 as the date for hearing argument on the question of the federal government's drinking-driving legislation that went into effect Dec. 1 last year.

CHARGED BEFORE

Lawyer Dermod Owen-Flood appeared before Ostler as counsel for both Webb and Roberts each who had been charged with the offences in February before the Munroe decision.

Owen-Flood argued that all charges should be quashed because the coupling of the breath-test offence, now invalid, with the impaired driving offence affected the outcome of the trial.

Owen-Flood said the conduct of Webb's trial in March was based on what the accused said and did concerning the breathalyzer test when he was arrested.

Ostler agreed the trial could have been misleading because the breath-test law was "as it appeared to be" at the time.

NO OPPOSITION

Lawyer Lloyd McKenzie, appearing for the attorney-general's department, said his instructions were not to oppose Owen-Flood's bid.

Prosecutor Peter Birkett asked for an adjournment of both cases until there had been a ruling by the Supreme Court of Canada on the Munroe decision or for a court judgment using the old impaired driving section of the code before the December legislation.

Ostler refused adjournment and quashed all charges against Webb and Roberts, commenting that they had been infected with the "malady of nullity."

Man Admits Sword Attack

Gursharn S. Mann, 28, of Vancouver, described as an Okalla prison guard with a master's degree in political science, was charged with assault causing bodily harm and theft over $50.

A charge of attempted murder was dropped by the Crown after Mann pleaded guilty to assaulting Ragbier S. Bhandar and his wife of 271 Nicola in an Esquimalt parking lot.

Constable Robert Vining of Esquimalt testified he learned Mann had been asked to leave a dance at the Dominion Hall after twice being refused a dance by Mrs. Bhandar.

He had been admitted to the dance when he said he was an agent of the attorney-general's department investigating East Indian dances.

Mann went to the temple, Vining said, stole the sword during a worship service, returned to the hall and attacked the Bhandars as they left. Mrs. Bhandar was cut on the arm, her husband on the thumb. Mann was remanded to April 30 for presentence psychiatric reports.

Escaper Shot Dead By Police

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 31-year-old escaper from the British Columbia Penitentiary was killed in a gun battle with police Tuesday night in the city's east-end.

The man, identified by police as Murray Allan Boyd, who was serving a five-year sentence for theft at the time of his escape, was dead on arrival at hospital after exchanging shots with police near a community centre.

Acting on a tip, an RCMP officer and two city police detectives had moved into the area in an unmarked car.

When the man spotted the car, he jumped into a pickup truck, rammed the cruiser and opened fire with a pistol.

ARMY MUTINEERS THREATEN CAPITAL

Troops Land in Trinidad

FLAMING EFFIGY of Treasury Board President C. M. Drury lights up Parliament Hill during protest demonstration Tuesday night. Close to 2,000 members of the Confederation of National Trade Unions and the Quebec Federation of Labor gathered to protest the government's treatment of 457 former Montreal mail truck drivers, temporarily setting aside their own differences. PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad — Commonwealth troops from neighboring islands landed today to help the Trinidad government put down a mutiny which threaten this capital city.

The 200 army mutineers seized the Chaguaramas army base in support of the Black Power movement and the rebels were reported to be moving on the capital.

Two days of street rioting and fighting on Chaguaramas Peninsula, 12 miles from Port of Spain, have left five persons dead.

Two women were wounded today in separate outbreaks of shooting in downtown Port of Spain where a state of seige has been declared.

SMALL ARMS

The United States agreed today to fly small arms to Trinidad to help the government deal with the mutiny and also ordered its Caribbean task force to sail for the port to evacuate Americans if necessary.

Washington is reported to have 2,000 marines stationed on the helicopter carrier Guadalcanal which is heading towards Trinidad.

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — President Nixon has signed a water quality improvement act which provides "the first comprehensive method" for dealing with oil spills from vessels even beyond the U.S. three-mile territorial sea.

The act deals with the contiguous zone, generally defined as 12 miles out to sea, and differs in that fact from Canada's proposed Arctic pollution bill which specifies control over seas up to 100 miles from land.

The U.S. has rejected the Canadian proposal, which would also extend territorial waters to the limit of 12 miles from the present three.

Nixon signed the U.S. bill only days before Canada's proposed legislation was unveiled.

The spokesman said the act is considered to be within the laws already established by the 1956 Geneva convention on the territorial sea and contiguous zone and the 1954 agreement on the prevention of pollution of the sea by oil.

Victorians Take Action On High Cost of Dying

By JACK SCOTT

Victorians are seizing the opportunity to hold the line on the high cost of dying.

Membership in the local branch of the Memorial Society of British Columbia, a non-profit organization providing simple, no-frills funerals at a basic price of $125, has shown an unprecedented growth in the first quarter of 1970.

Directors of the society here say that enrolment in the 14-year-old organization took a spectacular rise with reports of a major take-over of British Columbia undertaking establishments and cemeteries by a United States-based company.

Approaches have been made to at least two Victoria firms by Service Corporation International, of Houston, Texas, following their purchase of leading mortuaries and cemeteries in the Vancouver area.

The take-over there was criticized in the legislature by West Vancouver Liberal MLA Allan Williams who charged complicity with the government and Attorney-General Leslie Peterson in a scheme "to make profit out of bereavement."

It prompted a call from Herb Capozzi, Social Credit member for Vancouver Centre, for a complete investigation into the high cost of funerals.

Meantime, the Memorial Society, founded originally by members of the Unitarian Church, has completed arrangements to price its services to Vancouver Island members at the mainland level.

OFFICE, MORGUE

Premises in Victoria at 632 John Street have been refurbished to provide an office and morgue. A full-time undertaker represents the North Vancouver firm of First Memorial Services Ltd., a private company associated with the society since 1961. A non-denominational chapel for memorial servies is in the planning stage.

While the original aim of the society was "to provide service which will ease the emotional and financial burdens of final arrangements and preserve in memory the life rather than the death of the deceased" the cost factor has clearly played an increasing role in boosting membership.

MEMBERS UP

Society directors say that in the past three years enrolment in British Columbia has doubled to 30,000 members. Membership in Greater Victoria has increased from 1,800 in 1968 to more than 3,000 today.

"The growth rate has been so rapid in the first three months of this year that we can't keep our statistics up to date," said Mrs. Joan Bennett, secretary of the Victoria branch.

For the directors here the increase in membership means a long-awaited breakthrough to public acceptance of the concept that, if you've got to go, the way to go is with simplicity, a minimum of ritual and a price structure that's removed from emotion, status and "slumber-room salesmanship."

LARGEST HERE

From its original 55 Vancouver Unitarians the British Columbia branch has become the largest of its kind become the largest of its kind in Canada, second in North America only to the original Seattle society established in 1939.

David J. Murphy, recently appointed Vancouver Island manager of the society's undertaking firm, reports that some 100 funerals are conducted each month in Vancouver and an average of 12 a month in Victoria.

While the procedure of services is left to the discre-

Cambodia's Aid Plea Lodged With UN

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Cambodia lodged an urgent appeal through the United Nations today for aid in combatting North Vietnamese and Viet Cong invaders.

In a letter circulated as a UN Security Council document, Ambassador Khim Tit asserted his country can never "bow to the law of the jungle" and is determined to protect its independence and territorial integrity.

"For this reason," he added, "it addresses an urgent appeal to all countries which love peace and justice to provide the assistance it needs to combat these forces of foreign aggression which are violating the sovereignty of its national patrimony and all international law."

U.S. President Richard Nixon is reported considering an urgent plea for weapons and other materials made last week by the new Cambodian regime, but Washington sources believe it has placed him in a delicate diplomatic and political situation.

He has taken a position against widening U.S. involvement in Southeast Asia, and is under congressional pressure to adhere to this policy, even though the Cambodian request was not for troop support.

Military spokesmen in the Cambodian capital today said North Vietnamese troops and Viet Cong guerrillas have launched a major assault against the provincial capital of Takeo, 50 miles from Phnom Penh, and government units have been withdrawn from the town.

Tight Controls For Lotteries

Charitable and religious organizations will be limited to three lotteries a year in which 35 per cent of the proceeds must go to charity under provincial government regulations made public today.

Bingos are the only exception to the rule and may be held a maximum of 52 times a year under the guidelines spelled out by the attorney-general's department following the federal government action to turn licencing of gambling over to the provinces.

Only charitable and religious groups will be allowed to conduct lotteries.

NO WAGES

No wages other than a "nominal honorarium" may be paid to persons selling lottery tickets or managing a lottery.

A financial statement must be supplied to the government on the previous lottery held before a new licence will be granted and the attorney-general has the power to order an audit by an independent accountant.

The regulations appear to impose tight provincial government control on gambling as promised earlier by Attorney-General Leslie Peterson.

By ROBERT ESTABROOK
The Washington Post

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.— Many diplomats concerned with environment questions believe that the United States has a strong legal case in its Arctic waters dispute with Canada but is nevertheless likely to lose the argument in terms of world opinion.

Canada acted earlier this month to assert a right to control pollution in a zone extending 100 miles out from its Arctic islands and also to claim a new 12-mile limit for national sovereignty. Although the U.S. asserted that it would not recognize either claim, these unilateral moves have occasioned nowhere near the international outcry they might have brought at another time.

One reason is that "environment" has suddenly become a magic phrase. To criticize so obviously popular an effort as pollution control would be like opposing progress or endorsing sin.

Another reason is that for their own individual purposes a number of countries want to see a change in the present three-mile limit on national sovereignty as recognized in international law.

Some nine Latin American countries, including Brazil, Argentina and Peru, have asserted national jurisdiction extending out 200 miles and see support of their claims in the Canadian effort. Certain Arab countries are said to have mentioned the possibility of hemming in Israel.

Diplomats note that the United States itself supported an extension of national sovereignty to six miles with an additional six-mile exclusive fishing zone at an international conference in 1960.

12-MILE LIMIT

The change failed of adoption by one vote, but nearly 60 countries now claim a 12-mile limit. Recently the state department called for a new effort to agree on a 12-mile zone.

A few larger countries agree with the U.S. contention that existing international law must be respected until it is changed. They also share the American fears that the Canadian effort may encourage such countries as Indonesia and the Philippines to press claims that straits between islands in their archipelagoes constitute national waters.

Some analysts also point out that, whatever the justification for prevention of pollution in the Arctic, the Canadian move is not wholly altruistic in other respects. Extension of territorial waters to 12 miles off Newfoundland and British Columbia and a claim of the entire Bay of Funday, for example, would benefit Canadian fishermen at the expense of others.

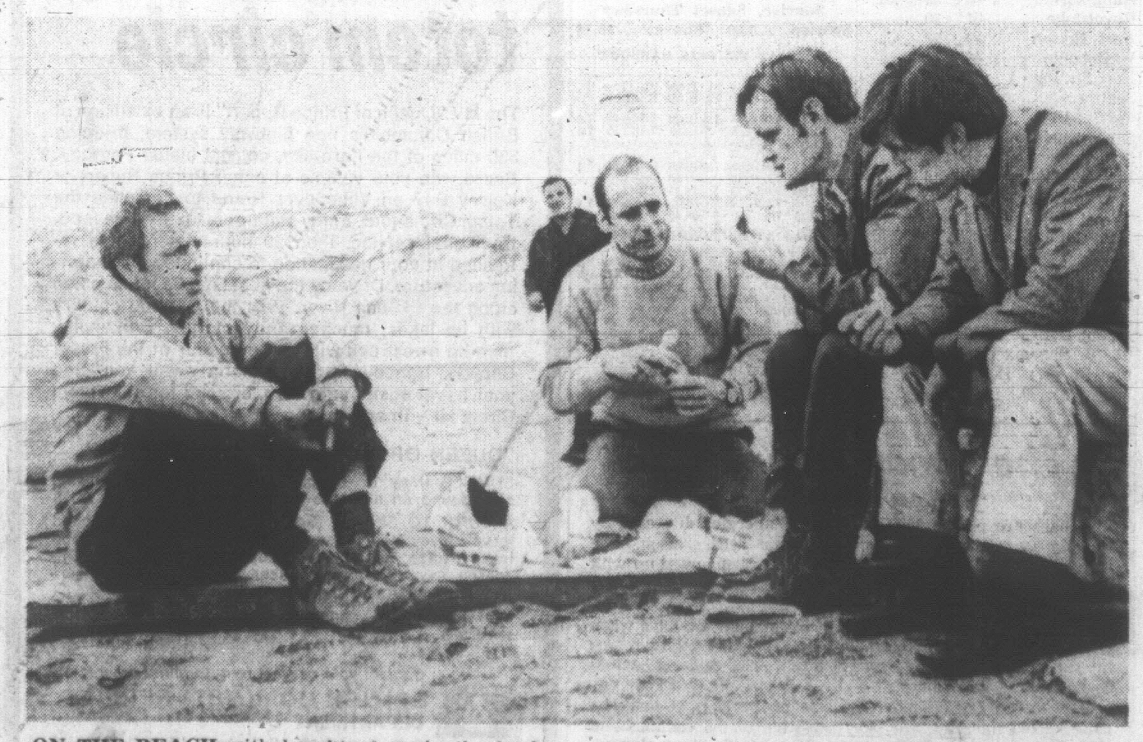

LAW CLOUDY

Even with misgivings on such points, however, many authorities here acknowledge that existing international law is cloudy on such problems as pollution. It was written to protect the rights of navies and shipping concerns, not the environment.
